Cafeteria Maintains High Standards

Daily, 75 per cent of the student body has eaten lunch in the Grade A cafeteria, the record shows.

To take care of this number, Mrs. Ruth Lewis, manager, has two assistants, Mrs. Ruth Strickland and Mrs. Sudie Lamm. There are 20 to 25 student workers.

For "their cooperative spirit" these workers were given a booster party by their managers.

Mrs. Lewis points out that the staff assures every person eating in the cafeteria his seven basic food elements every day.

To promote more interest in the business department, Mrs. L. T. Lassiter, head of the department, supplies the 102 students in the department with special activities in order to give them experience in their selected fields.

The 20 students in the bookkeeping class discovered they had to apply every phase of their bookkeeping when they encountered the "Dean Practice Set."

By one student's taking dictation from M. W. Weaver, principal, each day, the 20 shorthand students expect to gain more skill and experience.

For special emphasis in typing II, Mrs. Lassiter is giving the "Ten Key Adding Listing Machine Course" to the 22 students enrolled.

Harvey Evans's eight grade. Through this study, they learned how to help solve the problems of teen-agers.

Out of the number of students playing in the Bailey High School Band, 24 are grade students.

Two clubs have been organized in the grades. The Class Club, started by Miss Parker's class, has helped them "to have a better time together," says their teacher. The purpose of the Good Citizenship Club, organized by the seventh grade is, according to Miss Bissette, their teacher, "to help the members become better citizens of the school and country."
