

Should We Have Senior Privileges ?

Cars

Soon senior privilege week will be arriving. Are senior privileges a wise idea? They are if they are accepted in the spirit in which they are given--a means of promoting self-discipline.

These privileges are a reward to the seniors, meeting requirements listed elsewhere in this issue, for their best in conduct and ability during their senior year.

They should be accepted with appreciation rather than taken advantage of as so many do. As the seniors enjoy these privileges, they must remember that their actions carry much weight on the possibility of the next seniors' having the same privileges.

With the co-operation of the seniors, senior privileges can and will be a deserved and respected opportunity for good clean fun, well deserved.

Cars, cars, cars,
They're all I ever see.
Cars, cars, cars,
Sometimes scaring me.

If I never have one
It will be all right,
Because cars sometimes
Can be an awful fright.

Big cars or little cars,
Both can be all right
But just don't go 'round
Racing them at night.

Cadillacs, other big cars
Can be lots of fun,
But then again they are
As dangerous as a bomb.

Now if you have a car,
I tell you what to do:
You must drive it safely
And you will live, too.
Tommy Stalings

Anyone Can Have A College Education

BHS has been able to boast of many accomplishments, but so far one boast has not been the high percentage of graduates going on to college.

Why?

There are many reasons:

1. Desire to get out and make money NOW
2. Lack of ambition
3. Failure to see need of higher education
4. Insufficient parental and financial backing

The first and second excuses are unspoken but true. Although there are many jobs for high school graduates, the higher positions go to the students with college diplomas.

Number three can be blamed on lack of encouragement from home and school, but number four can be overcome by any student.

Actually there are few tangible excuses. Anyone can get a college education if he so desires. One must decide for himself.

One's future rests on his decision.

SUNSET

Like a mighty, majestic King,
The sun sits upon its throne of treetops
A solemn moment before retiring.
Then swiftly and silently drops from its throne,
Struck down by the piercing, black sword of night.
Mary Ella Glover

SPRING

Tiny flower buds,
Shoots of grass,
Call of a bird--
Spring is here at last.
Peggy Braswell.

WASHINGTON'S PICTURE
Quiet,

Pensive,

Steady and true.

Wise,

Gentle,

Ready to do

The best he can. A. J.

BAILEY BUGLE

BAILEY, NORTH CAROLINA

FIRST PUBLISHED-1939

PUBLISHED BY

JUNIOR ENGLISH CLASSES
COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT