

Bugle Receives Award Gained Last fall

CLASSES BUILD PROGRAMS AROUND TEXAS

"Keep up the good work," commended James Butler, chairman of public relations at East Carolina College, as Peggy Braswell, editor, accepted the gold-plated plaque on behalf of the journalism class.

The BUGLE won the award last fall, but because of printing errors the paper was unable to receive the plaque prior to last month.

"Excellence in writing and production" were the qualifications that rated the BUGLE the "best mimeographed paper present at the East Carolina College Press Institute."

B.J.B. WINS CONTEST

Betty Jean Brantley, former student, and sister, Rose, won the 4-H Talent contest over approximately 24 contestants from Nash county schools.

Winners for the junior and intermediate clubs were the Momeyer Jr. Club and Coopers Intermediate Club.

Appointed to represent the Bailey Senior 4-H Club were Kay Wiggs, Christie Finch, and Sue Bisette.

Fifth-graders in Mrs. T. C. May's room centered their chapel program this month around their unit study of the Lone Star State of Texas.

For their devotion several members of the class quoted different passages of scripture, followed by a song.

Jack Fatmon and Lois Bailey took an imaginary trip to Texas, made possible by their fairy godmother, played by Helen Joyce Francis, who sang to them "When You Wish Upon A Star."

A welcome was extended the young visitors by Ted Whitley, acting as Governor Daniel of Texas. The two visitors carried with them on their trip greetings from His Excellency, Luther H. Hodges of North Carolina, and the Honorable M. W. Weaver of Bailey, North Carolina.

To present one of the flowers of Texas to the North Carolinians, Kay Strickland sang "The Yellow Rose of Texas."

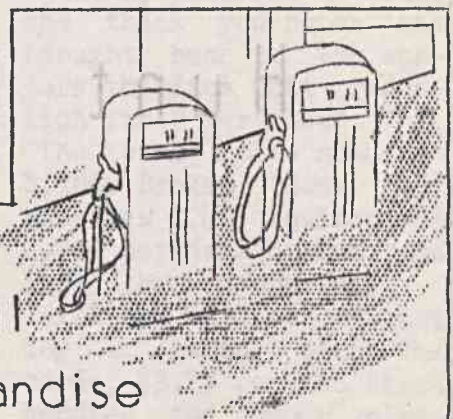

"Most of our program was imaginary," states Mrs. T. C. May, "but the letters from Governor Hodges, Governor Daniel, and Principal Weaver were real."

Fourth-graders in Miss Ida Marie Parker's room presented in chapel this month two plays entitled "The Princess Who Could Not Cry" and "Betsy Finds A Way."

For their devotion they repeated in unison "The Prodigal Son" followed by a song, "Hymn of Praise."

Margaret Finch played the part of the princess in "The Princess Who Could Not Cry", and Nina Sanders was narrator.

In "Betsy Finds A Way", Betsy May played the leading part; narrator was Sue Dameron.
