

Our Miss Turnage Seniors Lead Honor Roll For Year

Hailing from Black Creek, a rural community of approximately 300 people, is Miss Ruth Turnage, Bailey's new Home Economics teacher.

Miss Turnage has shown considerable interest in working with the students at BHS. Her students love her, basketball players admire her enthusiasm and spirit, and the cheerleaders appreciate her interest and help which enabled them to be one of the best cheerleading groups in the county.

At Bailey, Miss Turnage not only teaches five classes of home economics, but she is FHA Advisor, co-sponsor of the freshman class, scorekeeper for the basketball team, cheerleader advisor, and she also holds adult classes.

Mrs. Faye T. Coleman, present State FHA Advisor, was Miss Turnage's home ec. teacher at Lee Woodward; and she encouraged Ruth to become a home ec. teacher.

As a student at East Carolina College in Greenville, North Carolina, Miss Turnage was vice-president of the Home Economics Club and president of the girl's dormitory for two years. She was also a member of the Westminster Fellowship and YWCA.

Miss Turnage plans to return to Bailey again next year and continue teaching.

Miss Turnage was heard to say, "The school officials and community have accepted me from the beginning, and have made me feel as though I belong here."

With an average of ten seniors achieving the honor roll each grading period, the seniors have led the school for the year.

Five of the seniors have made the honor roll each time report cards have gone out this year. They are Christy Finch, Beth Harris, Jasper Horton, Fannie Ruth Howell, and Alice Issette. Those who missed the year mark by one grading period are Kay Issette, Evelyn Peele, and Kay Wiggs. Elaine Bunn, Elaine Edwards, Nancy Joyner, Celia May, and Hodges Privette made the honor roll at least one grading period during the year.

Barbara Carroll, Marjorie Hinton, Joan Stone, and Janet Weaver are the juniors who made honor roll each six weeks while Connie Lamm, Robert E. Lee, Linda Manning, Carolyn Medlin, Barbar Nell Peele, Linda Stallings, Sandra Stott, and Mary Edna Vick made honor roll at least once during the year.

Sophomore, Andra Cozart, was the only person in her class who made the honor roll list each six weeks. Only Ann Brock and Barbara Sue Lamm missed the year mark by one grading period. Betty Beard, Sarah Ann Privette, and Kay Thompson, also sophomores, made honor roll as much as one grading period during the year.

Judy Smith, freshman, is the only member of her class who made the honor roll list each six weeks while Barbara Nell Brown missed the year mark by one grading period. Mary Elizabeth Glover, Elizabeth Lamm, and Maxine Liles, also freshmen, made the honor roll at least one grading period during the year.

A handful of common sense may often be worth a bushel of learning.
