

WOOD PILE PHILOSOPHY.

To those who talk, and talk, and talk,
This proverb should appeal;
The steam that blows the whistle
Will never turn the wheel.

When the fire alarm is heard step
on the gas, or the truck may beat
you there.

Don't ever marry for money. But don't let money stand in the way.

Save your tin cans. Henry Ford
may need them sometime.

If you think you can't, you won't,
it has been said. But it's just as true the other way, if you think you can you will.

Don't argue with a woman. She'll say enough for both.

If you can't tell the difference between mush rooms, and toad stools, eat them. If they don't kill you they are mushrooms.

If you want to see how many friends you have, try to borrow five dollars.

Never fall in love. You might hurt yourself.

Some people eat to live, others live
to eat. Which are you?

Edith: Remember, George, it's
the early bird that gets the worm.

George: If that's the case I'll snooze a while longer. I don't want no worm.

I see like a lightning bug—all lit
up.

Why are some women like the Niagra Falls? Talk. Talk. Talk.
Talk.

Fish! Fish! Suckers are always caught. Did you bite?

No. I only nibbled.

I thought the hook smelled fishy.

Recently I took a trip out west.
The price for the railroad ticket
$75.25. I found out that the price was 25 cents, and the $75.00 the company's profit. There must be discrimination in rates somewhere.

Soap box orator: I pause to ask myself a question.

Voice: Don't do it, you will only
get a foolish answer.

Young bride (to butcher): Send me a few cow licks, and a half pint
of gravy.

Mr. Teeter (on math class): Now think, Winifred, what would you have if you had a dollar and I gave you two more?

Winifred: I suppose I'd have a fit.—Roy Whitley.

John—"My wife waits for the least little thing on my part to make trouble."

Johnson—"You're lucky—mine's a self-starter."
