SENIORS' FAVORITE BOOKS

When asked about their favorite books, the Seniors gave those listed below according to their popularity:

Boys

Girls

The Call of the Wild - London The Adventures of Tom Sawyer-Mark Twain The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes - Doyle The Count of Monte Cristo-Dumas Janice Meredith - Ford 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea-

Jane Eyre - Bronte Les Miserables - Hugo The Rosary - Barclay The Count of Monte Cristo -Dumas

SPELLING À LA SENIORS

Verne

Even though the seniors are not perfect spellers, they at least show originality in their spelling as indicated by the following words taken from their daily lessons:

dictionary - dicshunarry anecdote anigoat - babptise - ate baptize eighth doctah doctor ettiquette edicute

While the English teacher was assisting some with their newspapers, Ned Ritchie gave the spelling lesson to the class. When he came to a difficult word, he asked, "How do you pronounce e-r-r-o-n-e-o-u-s?" And then some misspelled it!

Miss Watson: Spell anecdote. Ralph: J - o - k - e.

Miss Watson had just given out the word manuel to be spelled. Ruby Smith: Is that the King Manuel we sing about in church?

GUIDE POSTS ALONG THE ROAD OF LIFE

Luck seems to favor the man who doesn't count on it. Flying off the handle suggests that you have a screw loose. The victory of success is half won when one gains the habit of work.

Doing the impossible is frequently done by an amateur because he doesn't know it's impossible.

Every time one man puts a new idea across he finds ten men who thought of it before he did - - but they only thought.

Son-rise at our house is a 8:25 a. m. - P. J. Huneycutt

A blotter is something you look for while the ink dries. Readers Digest.