Basketball In Its Prime

Basketball is in its prime and A. H. S. boys and girls are in the roll for conference championship.

The girls are small compared to last year but their speed has made many believe that they are superior to last year's team, which came second in the conference. Jane Perry, leading Albemarle forward, has been putting about an average of fifteen points a game through the hoop, while Ruth Townsend has been holding down the opponents by her fine guarding.

The boys have already surpassed last year's record (which was not very good) and are hoping to come out with the conference championship.

They are a little discouraged since losing to Barium and Children's Home, but they still have the spirit that is important in basketball. "Red" Bennett, center, is the leading scorer for the boys, while Reed Gaskin's guarding and team work always show up well.

Athlete Of The Month

Twelve reliable students, who form the board for choosing the outstanding athlete of the month, have this time selected silent E. A. Bingham, the captain and forward of the Albemarle High School basketball team.

E. A. is not a large person, but he packs plenty of fight and courage upon his 5 ft. 8, 130-lb. frame. Quoting Coach De Lotto about E. A., "He has one the deadliest eyes for the basket of any high school player I have ever seen. No opposing team can afford to let up with E. A. in the ball game."

So far this year E. A. has hit 13 out of 14 free shots that he has received during the competition and fever of a hard-fought game. These figures alone show what an asset E. A. is to the team. He isn't the leading scorer on the team, but is always in there shooting, fighting, and scrapping with the best of the lot.

To a natural-born shooter and a friendly person, our respects!

"Red" Bennett Wins Cup

"Would God I were a tender apple blossom!" Stopping to find the owner of such a lovely, melodious voice, the reporter came upon devastating, pulse-a-pating Red "Bentina" Bennett, recently chosen as Miss Albemarle High School of 1942 in the men's beauty contest sponsored by Miss Law's twelfth grade homecoming as their chapel program.

"Oh, (long and drawn out) would God I were a tender apple blossom."

Lady Bennett obligingly interrupted his song long enough to answer a few questions.

He had just won over thirty-three boys, each as lavishly bedecked as possible, and each representing business concerns of Albemarle who furnish aid for the Full Moon.

"Miss" Bennett's gorgeous outfit, modeled after those worn by Carmen Miranda, was complete with turban and without midriff.

Not exactly being on the delicate side, "Bentina" has a hard time trying to keep the scales down to a meager 192 lb.

"Diet!" he exclaimed. "That's not so important in a beauty contest. I eat everything I want." That's right, too. He has one pernicous meal per day, which lasts from sun-up to sun-down.

He is dunc-mad, of course, and when it comes to the rhumba, he's out of this world.

He seemed very happy about the recent contest, had an hilarious time gloating over his competitors; he simply enthused over "Roberta" Roger's costume.

Lady Bennett, no matter how famous he gets as a basketball star, plans to start a collection of these loving cups, so would-be future Miss Americas, take warning!
