Students Attend Choral Workshop

Twelve students from Albemarle High School attended the North Carolina Choral Workshop at Boone for a week this past August, eleven of them on scholarships.

Scholarships were given by the Modern Music Masters' Society, Lion's Club, Eastern Star, Woman's Club, Civitan Club, Stanly Hardware, and one by an anonymous donor.

Recipients of these scholarships were Arce Rose Rich, Elaine Mills, Barbara Holt, Elaine Lowder, Susie Swaringen, Amorelle Tucker, Charles Smith, Edward Hatley, Belvin Terry and Ted Burleson. Linda Duke, along with Mr. and Mrs. Fry, completed the Albemarle representation.

The workshop was under the direction of Dr. Lara Hoggard, who will direct the Festival Chorus in Greensboro next spring.

Reporter Chosen For Stanly News

Joan Renger, an outstanding member of the Senior class, was chosen by a committee, September 8, to be the Stanly News and Press reporter for A.H.S. The new reporter has already written four interesting articles for the paper and will continue to do so each week throughout the school year.

Joan is a member of the Mixed Chorus, National Honor Society, and the M.M.M. She is the assistant business manager of the Crossroads staff and a member of the Full Moon feature staff. Yet all these school activities do not keep her from taking an active part in church work, for she sings in the Lutheran choir and is a member of the Luther League.

Creative Writing Is Starting Again

Mrs. J. L. Cashwell will again teach the Creative Writing Club this year. Students volunteer for this club, which meets fourth period every Thursday.

The purpose of this club is to better the writing and speaking habits of the students. A magazine called "The Inkwell" is published in the spring, using short stories and poems written by the students.

Students participating this year are: Pat Allan, Elaine Lowder, Opal Eudy, Amorelle Tucker, Juanita Courville, Arce Rose Rich, Gale Whitfield, and Peggy Smith.

A chest X-ray can detect early tuberculosis.

5 Staff Members Attend Institute

Representatives from the "Full Moon" and from the annual are attending the Thirteenth Annual North Carolina Scholastic Press Institute for high school newspaper and yearbook editors at Chapel Hill October 1-2.

Those attending are: Frances Litaker, editor, and Charlotte Pope, feature editor of the "Full Moon," and Martha Harward, assistant editor, Joan Renger, assistant business manager, and Peggy Furr, junior representative of the "Crossroads."

The purpose of this conference is to give students help in their high school publications. The principal speaker will be Dean Laurence Campbell of the School of Journalism of Florida State University. Also featured on the program will be a series of panel discussions conducted by newspaper editors and reporters.

A banquet is planned for Saturday night at the Carolina Inn with Mr. John Harden of Greensboro, author of a new book as speaker.

Miss Frances Youngblood, president, will preside at the conference.

Student Council Is Again At Work

The Student Council was at hand again this year to help freshmen get off to a good start.

Several of the members worked as guides to show the freshmen through the building and introduce them to their teachers. The freshmen were also presented a handbook by the Student Council.

Some of the Student Council has been helping to make the football games more enjoyable. They run a concession stand at each home game. They have been selling candy, ales, peanuts, chips, and hotdogs.

Another group has been handling the crowds and patrolling the sidelines. They have also been helping take up tickets.

Women's faults are many,
Men have only two:
Everything they say
And everything they do.

Teacher: That is the third time you have looked on Bob's paper.
Pete: I know—his writing is awful.

New Lunch Plan Introduced; Diners Go In Three Shifts

The major change in the A.H.S. schedule this year is in the lunch hour.

To avoid the dinner rush, the executive committee has drawn up a new schedule and put it into operation.

Students are dismissed for lunch during three rotating half hour periods beginning after the third period class at 11:30. Those assigned to the first lunch period go directly to the cafeteria; all other students report to fourth period. Thirty minutes later, at 12:04 the second group takes a break from fourth period and goes to lunch; the first group then reports to fourth period. The last group is dismissed for lunch at the end of fourth period, and classes resume schedule at 1:12.

This change of schedule has closed the student store at lunch period, according to a state law which forbids operation of a concession during the serving of school meals. The lunch period being one continuous run from 11:30 to 1:12 enforces this law.

Student opinion has run high, each being ready to express his ideas on the subject. Typical of arguments against is Jean Renger's, "A more appropriate means could be found for students to eat at school and still eat with their friends."

Many students, however, agree with Frances Litaker: "I like it very much, because it makes less confusion at lunch."

Mr. Cashwell, principal, summed it up saying, "I think this lunch period is the best change that has been made in a long time."
