Graduation Ceremonies Are June 5

By TERRI PENNINGTON

With the closing of the year, we need to recognize those outstanding seniors either for their academic achievements or for their leadership. This year those students are Jim Adams, Charles Grigg, and Heather Brooks.

Jim Adams, a very active student here at AHS, is this year's valedictorian. Jim plans to attend Clemson in the fall. Through the year Jim has written the column "Hitting the High Notes." With this article he has sent shock waves across the school with his interesting stories including "The J.R. Reid Legacy." When asked about his high school career, "I've enjoyed my four years at AHS but it's time to look toward the future with other goals to accomplish."

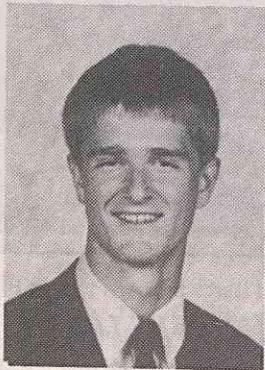

This year's salutatorian is Charles Grigg. President of the Student Council, Charles is planning to attend the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. When asked to comment on his four years at AHS, Charles exhibited his usual attitude and didn't reply.

Heather Brooks, our Senior Class President, plans to attend Western Carolina University. Being class president, she has worked diligently throughout the year planning graduating ceremonies, ordering class t-shirts, and giving out senior materials. She stated, "My four-year experience at AHS has been rewarding."

The Senior Class recognizes these three seniors for a job well-done and wishes them success and happiness in the future.

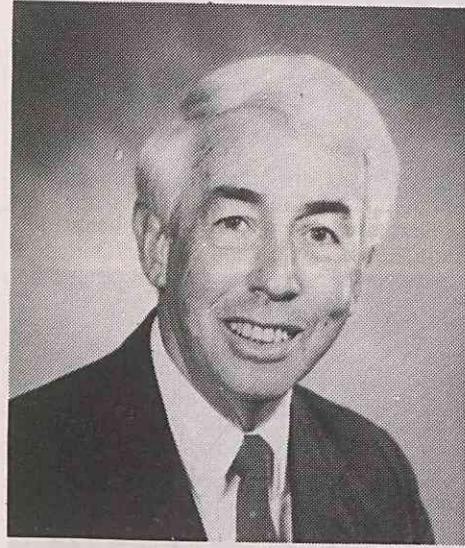

Jim Adams, the class of '87 Valedictorian, will be attending Clemson University next fall.

This year's Salutatorian, Charles Grigg, will be heading to Chapel Hill.

Heather Brooks, senior class president, is going to the mountains to attend Western Carolina.

Charlie Adams will be the guest speaker at this year's ceremonies.

Graduation To Begin at 8:00 p.m.
on June 5

By DAVID BAUCOM

Charles Adams, executive director of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association (NCHSAA), will be the speaker at the graduation ceremony on June 5. He is a native of Cary, North Carolina, where he went to high school. He has received degrees from East Carolina and North Carolina State. He has served in the army, as well as teaching and coaching at various high schools.

Adams now lives in Chapel Hill, where he is the executive director for the NCHSAA. Under this organization, he has promoted a scholar-athlete program, created the Super Saturday concept for basketball, and developed policies to minimize loss of instructional time at school.

He is an experienced speaker, having addressed thousands of coaches and administrators in various workshops. The Senior Class welcomes Mr. Adams as their graduation speaker.

Marshals Lead The Way

By LAMAR CHANCE

Tonight, the spotlight will be upon 145 seniors, but there are, however, ten other students who will be the Rodney Dangerfields of the graduation ceremonies. Who are these guys? They are the 1987 graduation marshals.

The marshals, determined by class rank, are the top ten juniors with the top junior serving as the head marshal. This year's head marshal will be Billy Joe Thomas. The other nine juniors are Mariel Baucom, Beth Neel, Jimmy Hays, Delores Eudy, John Bramlett, David Radford, Leanna Mitchell, Jenny Hatley, and Valerie Haynes. Andrew Wines, who is attending school in Germany this year, will be recognized as a marshal in absentia.

During the three days of practice, the marshals will run through the ceremonies and do some odd jobs that will make the graduation ceremony run smoothly. At the actual event, the ten juniors will begin their night by taking up tickets, giving out programs, and helping to find seats. After seating the parents of the graduates, the marshals will then lead the seniors into the auditorium, and once the program is over, they will take the graduates out to the lobby.

So as all eyes will fall upon the seniors, a couple of "thank yous" should be given to these ten juniors for working diligently to make the "persons of the hour" look so good. From all 145 seniors, we thank you... a whole bunch!!

These ten junior marshals are all smiles for the upcoming graduation ceremonies.

Back To The Books

By TONY BURNS

Alas, the true signs of spring have started giving way to the blasting heat of a long-awaited summer. But wait! Before your mind casually directs your body towards Myrtle Beach, please remind yourself of those beloved finals.

Freshmen are probably deeply confused and highly irritated; nonetheless, there is no escape. Seniors, who rightly deserve to be, are fortunately immune from the mind-boggling examinations of the year's well-taught skills. Juniors and sophomores are too busy praying that the unfound cure for senioritis, a current disease that prevents seniors from participating in final exams, stays beyond the grasp of numerous dedicated scientists.

The schedule for finals is identical to the ones of the past. There will be two exams each day. The schedule is as follows: Friday, first and fourth; Monday, second and fifth; and Tuesday, third and sixth. Each of these days students are again allowed the open lunch and asked to conduct themselves in an orderly fashion.

And remember, as the clock slowly winds toward the third hour on that "good" Tuesday, to do your best and have a great summer.

Publication Editors Are Announced

By TONY BURNS

Publication editors, heads of the annual and journalism staffs, are prepared for next year's events. The job of publication editors directly involves what we read and see. They are responsible for the layout of the pages in our school paper and in the annual. The overall efforts of the publication editors are what make our annuals and newspapers very successful.

Next year's annual staff will be headed by Jimmy Hays and Kelly Blagg as co-editors-in-chief. Leslie Treadway will handle many of the book balancing tasks as business manager. The talents of "Mr. Slender" Phillip Scheble will be used for the accurate sports accounts. The classes will be covered by Kelly Blagg and for the special features of next year, Amanda Kimrey and Claudia Ballenger will be on the beat.

The journalism staff, those hard workers who bring to you The Full Moon, will have as their editor, Mariel Baucom. Beth Neel will attempt to keep debts a thing of the past as business manager. Angela Cook is sure to prepare a year of interesting reading as features editor. Entertainment editor Cindy Brewer will keep you informed of places to go and people to see; and, as news editor, Melynee Morgan will keep you up to date with the latest "low-down" in our school's activities. Due to lack of interest and a fruitless search for a sports editor, there will be no sports section in The Full Moon next year. Just kidding! The new sports editor is yet to be found.

Next year's editors will try to carry on the great Full Moon and Crossroads traditions.
