The Ideal Senior

I believe that it would be rather difficult to define the qualities of an ideal senior, although I have an idea that a senior is just another person and therefore the ideal senior is an ideal person.

Probably character is the most important factor in the making of an ideal person. Second is, without a doubt, the personality. If we have good character and a sunny personality we already have gone a long way toward being considered ideal.

There are however a few traits a senior should have which an ordinary person may not have. These are; perseverance, originality, and an open mind. By perseverance we are more likely to accomplish our goals. Originality is what people want today in every phase of life, because otherwise we become bored. The open mind is necessary to keep up with the civilization which is so swiftly moving, and to make us a part of the world today.

Reflection

Looking back on my school days now,
 My heart begins to soften
 If only time hadn't passed so fast,
 And I had passed more often.
