terest to him. As for apparatus to receive radio - phone, one may use a well-designed pocket set, laboratory set, or any other type. The radio-phone receiver is as a watch in respect to size, the smaller the watch, the more accurate it must be to function well, also the more expensive it will be.

Only a few possibilities have been mentioned in this article, those which will be of the most interest to the general public. Let every home have a radio-phone receiver that all the world may be at its finger tips, that all may hear the best. Let the inferior go and the superior supplant it.

THE WILSON SOCIETY HAS HAD A VERY SATISFACTORY YEAR

(By Henry Snuggs.)

The Wilson Literary Society has had a very successful year. In fact, taking into consideration the number of members, the efficient officers, the splendid programs, and the great improvement in every line of society work, we believe that it has had the most progressive year in its history.

The society was reorganized on September 16, 1921, with 56 members on roll—the greatest number the society has ever had. The following officers were elected: George Harris, President; Henry Snuggs, Vice-President; J. P. Sibley, Sec.-Treas.; Augustus Boger, Paul Smith, and Boyd Hatley were appointed as Executive Committee. These were an especially strong set of officers, who directed the work of the society with remarkable ability.

The Executive Committee has always provided excellent programs for the meetings, but they have been exceptionally good this year. Many fine debates showing a great amount of time and study have been heard in the society this year. Some of the most interesting queries discussed were: the abolition of the contract system of employing convict labor; government ownership of the merchant marine in the U. S.; the League of Nations; the granting of a bonus to the ex-service men of the World War.

The society has been fortunate in securing two able critics: Professor Stephens and Miss Keel, who have been of great assistance to the work. Under the strict but profitable criticism of these, the members have improved wonderfully, both in preparation of the work and in delivery.

On January 4, 1922, the society elected a new set of officers. These were as follows: Henry Snuggs, Pres., Boyd Hatley, Vice Pres., J. P. Sibley, Secretary and Treasurer.; (Mr. Sibley later resigned and Clarence Casper succeeded him). The Executive Committee appointed consisted of the following: George Harris, Augustus Boger and Ray Lowder.

The main feature of the year's work was the triangular debate. When the preliminary, which was arranged to select those who should represent the school in the triangular debate, was held, thirteen society members entered. That contest proved that the Wilson Literary Society is producing debaters who would be a credit to any school. Four Wilson members won their places on the debate teams; they won over the other schools in the triangular debates; and then made a very creditable showing at Chapel Hill.

Not only has the society advanced in debating, but in declaiming, as well. Many of the members have entered the preliminary declamation contest, and are now at work trying to perfect themselves in their delivery. The society is proud of these boys, who are anxious of the opportunity to improve themselves in a public contest of this kind. If you are skeptical of the fact that the Wilson Literary Society has some orators, come out to hear their final contest at commencement and be convinced.

The average attendance of all members this year has been approximately 94 per cent. About 91 per cent of those who have been on the program have responded. The programs have been arranged so that everyone has taken an active part. The profitable criticism and the fact that everyone has had some society work to do, has brought about a great improvement in every member.
