gradually making the members take an interest in and enjoy the meetings under the splendid management of President Sibley. Mr. Stephens and Miss Braswell also give valuable suggestions, which make the society still better.

Another thing which makes the society more interesting is the instrumental musical selections rendered by the several students who are members of the local bands. Music, indeed hath a charm, for the members listen attentively and applaud generously. There are some vocal duets, which are also enjoyed.

We have several good speakers and debaters, who have a wonderful opportunity to accomplish something, on account of the Wilson Literary Society's training.

JIGGS ENTERTAINS MAGGIE

(Arthur Harris.)

Friday evening the Maggies, winners in the recent Ladies' Home Journal campaign, were royally entertained by the Jiggs at the home of Mr. Daniel Boger Jiggs.

About 8 o'clock the Maggies and Jiggs began to gather at Davis' beautiful home. The Jiggs looked about and then breathed a sigh of relief for the Maggies had forgotten past animosities and left their rolling pins at home.

By 8:15 all had arrived and the games of the evening began. The first contest called for good hoppers. Twelve grains of rice were placed on a knife which was to be held while the person hopped across the room. Eight or more descended from their dignified positions and attempted the feat.

Came out victorious with ten grains reposing on the knife. Dan liberally gave prizes to all contestants. The prizes consisted of salted peanuts, prize boxes, and stick candy.

The second game was cross questions and crooked answers. The questions and answers brought forth much laughter as they were as different as day and night. Then while the guests were lined up for this game, they began the old Virginia reel, which was entered into with a zest.

About 9:15 Dan, accompanied by Arthur Harris, was seen to mysteriously disappear. Where they had gone, no one could guess. Twenty minutes later they reappeared with a waiter heaped high with Eskimo pies, and the mystery was solved. They had been to the drug store. The pies were followed in rapid succession by luscious red apples and delicious candy.

At this time Misses Pridgen, Stroupe and Huntley discovered it was time for all little children to be in bed, and therefore, took their departure. This broke up the spirit of the party and soon all began to leave. Once again dope was upset, and the Jiggs were heartily thanked by the Maggies and allowed to depart without slipping away with their shoes in their hands and a look of deadly fear on their faces.

When I'm tipsy I see double.

You're in luck.

I'm luck? How so?

Why, when you come home from the club with too much on board and see two wives you get but not lecture.
