EDITORIALS

This issue of The Twig, the staff on behalf of the student body, respectfully dedicates to the memory of our beloved Miss Campbell. Since the Acorn is also to publish an edition sacred to her memory, we have not seen fit to go into the details of her life. It is merely an attempt on our part to try to express in a small way the love and respect which we bore for Miss Campbell. We have tried to make this edition one that our subscribers will desire to store away with other mementoes, to be kept and cherished.

It is hard for us, just as it is for all the branches of student activity, to continue our regular work, without the knowledge that we have Miss Campbell to encourage us, and lend new and helping ideas. She was instrumental in the founding of The Twig, and gave us loyal support, getting the girls to realize just how much it meant to a college to have a weekly newspaper, all its own. We are sure that she was proud of "the little Twig," as she always termed it.

Now that examinations are over, and we are settling down into the regular routine of work for the spring semester, each day makes us realize afresh our loss. We miss her Friday morning chapel services, we miss her cheery smile as we passed her in the hall, we miss the individual advice she gave each one of us when we went to her with our troubles, we miss her everywhere. It seems cruel. We cannot understand why we have to do without her. We can only say:

"We have but faith; we cannot know
For knowledge is of things we see,
And yet we trust it comes from thee
A beam in darkness, let it grow."

an enlargement of the facilities for carrying on such lines of work, particularly in providing enlarged "Y" room capacity as well as new equipment for it. It was her thought, however, that the students needed a more direct sort of training in their religious life and with a view to meeting these requirements she organized several Baptist Young People's Unions. Her mastery of the situation was well demonstrated in her ability to maintain the policy and usefulness of the Young Woman's Christian Association and at the same time add this other form of training. In this way she brought in a larger number of students for preparation for active Christian life. More than this, she encouraged voluntary study of the Bible and Missions.

Her third line of responsibility was general control over the routine life of the students. She served as a connecting link between the Student Government Association and the Faculty in matters of discipline. She displayed a rather unusual combination of firmness and gentleness in making her decisions and all of her dealings with the students were characterized by the highest form of tact. Miss Campbell was wise in counsel to an unusual degree and had wonderful poise in every emergency. Her cheerfulness and kindly spirit never forsook her, no matter what the trial was. There was a freedom from frigid dignity which gave full assurance to the students and made her approachable to them all. No officer in such a position could have been more accessible at all times than she was. One of the policies adopted from the very beginning was to "trust her girls" and depend upon them to keep faith with her.

On Saturday morning, Jan. 14, 1922, we held services in memory of Miss Campbell. These services will linger for a long time in the minds and hearts of all who participated. Her life will be an inspiration to all of us, and it will be true of her as was said of another, she "being dead, yet speaketh."

MEREDITH COLLEGE HOLDS A MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR DEAN

Dr. L. E. M. Freeman then read the resolutions drawn up by the Faculty, the associates of Miss Campbell.

Dr. Maddry next paid tribute to Miss Campbell. His words came right from the heart. He spoke of her fine influence on the girls of Baylor College, Belton, Texas, where he held an evangelistic meeting with her as he later did at Meredith. Thus he knew well her deep and keen interest in the lives of the girls and her love for them. He said, "Miss Campbell is not truly dead. The day of her departure was Commencement Day for her. She will live on in the lives of the young women who came under her helping and uplifting influence.

Each student, member of the Faculty and friend present was handed a print from the latest photograph of Miss Campbell. These were presented by Dr. Maddry.
