Only one more set of those bothersome exams.

* * *

And the Commencement speakers are already secured. The future looms bright, indeed.

* * *

Our idea of a pessimist is the girl who exclaimed after finishing exams, "Now what do we worry about?"

* * *

Inquiries have been made concerning the delayed appearance of THE TWIG. This is a proof of its continued existence in spite of the worries and difficulties which have suppressed it for the last two or three weeks. Every girl seemed to think during exams that writing for the faculty was enough, and thus the illness of this paper.

If anyone ever would dare characterize such an awe-inspiring group as a college faculty in the modern phraseology, "social hounds," we would be inclined to follow their example. But as such things are not being done this season, we must perforce content our minds with the passing comment that our faculty fortunately believes in social activities. The mysterious Blue Moon Inn party, according to all descriptions, was a highly amusing and interesting affair.

The subject of Banner Rooms still engages our attention. Cleanliness and attractiveness in rooms should be found without any reward, but since noteworthy mention is to be made of rooms in which such conditions abide, it seems that as a mere matter of self-respect, each room should approximate the standard set for such honorable mention. Ingenious and subtle, sometimes, may be the means to such a reward for example, one particular room in school lives in satisfactory peace and harmony because one of its occupants is happy only when she is putting the room in order, for which she, alone and undisputed, is allowed to "Carry the Banner." You might try the above method on your roommate should the Banner Mention persist in passing you by each month. Satisfaction is guaranteed if the right approaches are made.

The student government reception to be held on the night of Founder's Day is to be anticipated from afar. This event usually marks the real beginning of the social activities for the Spring Semester, and is considered by diverse critics to usually be a rather good start. The affair last year was apparently considered a highly successful one from the various standpoints of the various participants, nor is its repetition at all amiss. The reception this year, however, if all reports are to be trusted, is to far outshine its former self. The entertainment, refreshments, and decorative committees have already divided and subdivided themselves into many industrious units, and each is busily working, even now, to make its part of the evening the most successful. If the days till then proceed thus equally fruitful, and if the editor's vernacular in this instance is to be pardoned, "We can hardly wait!"

To those who have passed all their fall examinations, this list of motherly suggestions will not concern, but it is to those who have partly or wholly failed, and the freshmen particularly, that a perusal of the following will in no wise hurt. A senior or an assured junior may be able to nonchalantly agree that "College bred is four years loaf," but the freshmen and sophomores who are still mixing the batter, had best attend more or less strictly to the ingredients which they are handling. The regulation that students who have not passed at least eighteen semester hours of work will not be allowed to return to school next year, is to be strictly enforced. Of course, those who are not planning to return anyway, or those who have no ambitions left, this does not disturb. It is, however, to those underclassmen who have failed on two or more subjects last fall, that a word of encouragement is to be spoken. Success in this semester's classes is the only method by which last semester's failures may be atoned, and to any normal girl, even fairly interested in her work, this goal is not an impossibility. If you like Meredith, you'd dislike very much being unable to return, but more important than that is the sense of defeat and shame which would accrue as a result of a year's failure. It is in every girl's power to avoid such unfortunate situations as the above but now, at the beginning of this Spring Semester, is the time for her to realize this. The question is a very important one, and each girl has complete control of her voluntary effort and choice.

represents the true daughter of Philaretia. She has chosen the motto: "Plain living and high thinking" for her standard. To her mother society she says:

"Lead on O Philaretia, fair,
Lead upward day by day.
Thy violet banner in the air,
Thy daughters all will highly dare.
Brave mother, lead the way!"
