

NOTED AUTHOR SPEAKS HERE

Monday, January 13, James Street, author of The Gauntlet and other popular fiction and historical works, spoke to the student body and administration during the chapel period.

Mr. Street opened his remarks by challenging the youth to make a better world than the generation before them had made. Urging them not to fall back entirely on the conservatism of their elders, he asserted that conservatism in youth is unhealthy. Peace, he said, can never be attained until the entire world can become characterized by equality and freedom. He defined equality as total equality, not just social, economic, or religious equality.

Turning to remarks about books and his profession as a writer, Street classified authors in three groups: the artists, the craftsmen, and the starving writers. Being a writer of short stories and "popular novels," the author classifies himself among the craftsmen.

Popular writing, he maintained, has become big business because the public does not demand a higher form of literature, but readily accepts the inferior as well. As long as the public demands novels for entertainment and light reading, authors will continue to keep in mind percentages and selling qualities rather than the artists' conception of literature.

Mrs. Street, wife of the author, was in the audience. The couple are now residing at Chapel Hill.

The library contains 28,406 volumes and a large number of pamphlets. It also takes 192 magazines.

MEREDITH FRESHMAN WINS CHICAGO TRIP AS STATE 4-H CLUB WINNER

By MARILYNN FERRELL

How would you like a trip to Chicago by Pullman with all expenses paid, even to the tips? How would you like to live for several days in one of Chicago's largest and most luxurious hotels and attend banquets three times a day? How would it feel to be interviewed by Associated Press, to have your picture appear in papers all over North Carolina, and to broadcast over NBC? Wonderful, you say? Well, all of this, and more, too, happened to dark-haired, vivacious Jean McLamb, Meredith freshman from Sampson County, near Clinton, North Carolina. The trip to Chicago as a delegate to the Twenty-Fourth National 4-H Club Congress, December 1-6, was awarded Jean as a winner in 4-H Club contests in this state, and she was one of fourteen 4-H boys and girls who represented North Carolina at the Congress.

Jean has been a 4-H Club member for five years, and during this time she has carried through several projects in foods, clothing, and room improvement. Food preparation, including planning for meals, cooking, and marketing, especially interested Jean, and she kept records of everything she did along this line. When her records were submitted this year to the State 4-H contests, she was picked as the State winner in her special project, and as such she was entitled to the trip to Chicago with all expenses paid.

The fourteen winners from North Carolina, accompanied by L. B. Harrell, state leader of 4-H Clubs, and Miss Ruby Pearson, assistant leader, arrived in Chicago on December 2. The headquarters for the convention were in the Stevens hotel, where the delegates stayed. There were between 1,200 and 2,000 representatives at the Congress from forty-seven states and seven different countries including several South American countries, China, and Canada. The main topic for the convention was "4-H Clubs in a Changing World," and the different groups, made up of representatives from separate states, discussed various phases of this topic for an hour each day. On the last day of the Congress, a final debate was held in which the most important problems and their solutions were discussed.

On the rental shelf The Egg and I, by Betty Macdonald, and The Peacock Sheds His Tail, by Alice Tisdale Hobart, appear to be well worth the reader's time.
