

Today's Fashion Queen

DEBBIE BRADLEY

With the mid-winter formals just around the corner, Debbie Bradley is at her loveliest in a sweeping evening gown that would be an "eye-catcher" at any party. The dress of American beauty red velvet is fashioned with a sweetheart neckline, cap sleeves, a long bodice shirred at the waistline. The billowing skirt, falling in folds in front, is drawn up on each side to form a bustle across the back. With her dress she wears matching mitts of red velvet and black satin dance slippers interlaced with silver threads. Her jewelry consists of a lavalier of rhinestones and matching dangle earrings, and on her finger an amethyst set into a ring of white gold, a family heirloom.

was at the Cheyenne Mountain Folk School at Colorado Springs. Her study there was under Lloyd Shaw, square dance authority. She has danced extensively with the ethnological groups in New York City. She was also a recreational director this summer carrying exchange students on board ship to Europe and America — crossing the Atlantic six times in all.

Miss Doris Peterson, head of the Meredith physical education department, also attended Cheyenne Mountain Folk School, where she studied under Herb Greggorsen, folk dance authority. Miss Peterson has about three hundred folk dances in her "collection" at present.

Visitors from various colleges and city recreational organizations in the state are expected for this occasion.

VARIOUS SPEAKERS ADDRESS SOCIOLOGISTS

There have been many interesting activities going on in the Sociology Department. The programs and speakers have been of unusual interest, especially to those in this particular field.

On January 7, Dr. Katherine Joher, who is assistant director for the Institute of Research in Social Science and Professor of Sociology at the University of North Carolina, spoke to the introductory social work class on the subject, "The Relation of Sociology to Social Work."

Dr. Arthur Fink spoke at a dinner meeting at the S&W January 14 to sociology students. His topic was "The Profession of Social Work." Dr. Fink is head of the school of social work at the University of North Carolina.

One of the highlights of the year for the introductory sociology classes was the dinner at the

S&W with Dr. Howard Odum, who spoke on "The Role of Sociology in Our Contemporary World."

Of interest to all sociology students will be the monthly meeting of the club on January 20 at 6:45 p.m. The meeting will be at the Hut with Dr. John Gillis as speaker. Dr. Gillis is an anthropologist from the University of North Carolina. Slides of Peru will be shown.
