

Senior Art Exhibits

By BETTY HEFNER

Perhaps you have passed by the Art Department and have seen the walls bare with only thumb tack holes visible, and a bleak sign hanging on a door saying, "Gallery Closed." Then later, upon being invited, you walked down to the gallery to be greeted by a smiling student who in turn invited you to see her exhibition of hard work amid flowers, food, and bright lights. After you've registered and found the number of the first picture on the program, someone approaches you with plates of delicacies; so while you're munching and sipping, let's find out some facts about these people behind exhibits.

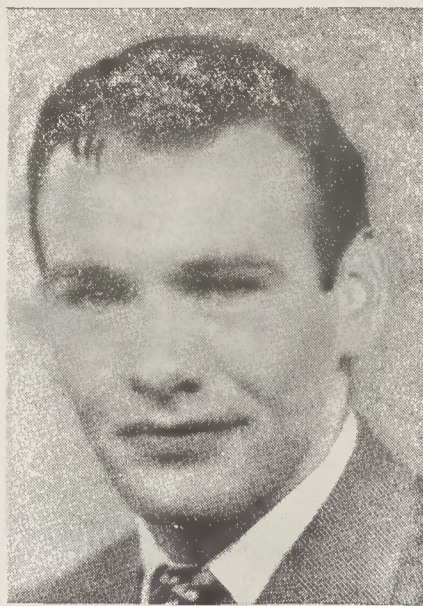

Jean Outlaw is responsible for the array of creations now on display. Our congratulations to you, Jean. She is the pert brunette of the art majors, and her main goal for after school work is interior decoration. From her ideas along this line shown in the gallery, one can see that she means business.

I'm sure you remember Doris Johnson's exhibit several weeks ago. If you see this tiny Mars Hill transfer dashing around the Art Department with a big grin on her face, stop and give her your opinion of her paintings. Sincere criticism helps all art majors. Besides being secretary-treasurer of the Alpha Rho Tau, she is the Managing Editor of the Acorn. Her knowledge and talent in art will go into teaching in this field in the elementary grades.

Sunshine Bellamy was the next student to exhibit her work. Besides her creative ability, she is a member of the A. A. Board. Sunshine (honest, that's her real name) has her main interest centered in commercial art sculpturing, but of course, that MRS degree is an important picture in Sunshine's life at present.

An art student who has already received, achieved, or whatever you may desire to call it—this degree is Bethea Wells. Her exhibit opens on May 14. Bethea has had practical experience along with her studies, for her new home has given her a chance to put her talent to use even in the tiniest corner. In her spare time she plans to "paint for fun" with her preference of mediums being oils.

These art students have all had their work exhibited in the Student Exhibition at the State Art Gallery, and are members of the Alpha Rho Tau.

Sports of the Day

By CATHERINE CARPENTER

The tournament bug will bite you if you don't watch out! Yes, the athletes of Meredith are getting a good workout, with three tournaments going on at once—softball, badminton, and tennis. In softball the seniors and freshmen combined forces against the juniors and sophomores. Victory in two out of three five-inning games will mean a win for one of the teams. Team captains are Hope Hodges and Faye Nichols, freshmen; Betty Moore, sophomore; Lela Butts, junior; and Jane Middleton, senior.

Birdies are flying in the gym, because fifteen girls are competing for the title of campus champion badminton player. Taking part in the advanced class are Chris Bordeaux, Marty Davis, Rhea Harmon, Peggy Patrick, Lefty Pugh, and Fran Thompson. Competing for the beginners title are Beverly Batchelor, Shirley Bone, Doris Concha, Hazel Ellington, Ann Hicks, Emma Lee Hough, Margaret Leach, Jean Taylor, and Marilyn Ware.

An interesting bit of news from St. Mary's is that the swimming pool has been declared unsafe so our swimmers have had to stay on drydock for two weeks.

On Saturday, April 24, Duke University was invaded by girls from all over the state to take part in a playday sponsored by Duke. Accompanied by Miss Phyllis Cunningham and Miss Lucy Ann Neblett, Meredith's representatives made a good showing. Cora Lee Sawyer was our archery star, winning over all other contestants in a Senior Columbia Round. Peggy Patrick's swimming form won for her first place in the side stroke and second place in the back crawl. However, the tennis and softball players were not so victorious, both losing in the first round. Bettie Compton played tennis; those playing softball were Jane Middleton, Marty Davis, Ann Critcher, Hope Hodges, Faye Nichols, Dorothy Singleton, Lela Butts, Marianna Morris, and Lois Shuffler.

A welcome event every spring is the A.A. Breakfast when the new A.A. board is honored by the old board. It will be held bright and early next Thursday at the chimney.
