

Spring Fad Upsets Meredith Routine

By BEVERLY BATCHELOR

Burned noses, peeling skin, and lobster-red appendages have invaded the campus! Meredith is turning out a crop of girls in variegated colors. Faculty members are bemoaning the steadily increasing number of failing students, forgotten conferences, and cut classes. Neglected boy-friends are disgustedly shouting, "O. K., if that means more to you. . . ." Miss Barnette is pessimistically stocking up an abundant supply of Ungentine. Why all the commotion? Yes—you guessed it—sun-kissed maidens are the campus rage once more, and when Meredith determines to get those luscious, golden-brown complexions on her campus, she does, regardless of consequences. But how far can a college go? Bare legs, suspiciously protruding from behind the pillars of Johnson Hall, have been sighted; now reservations have to be made for places on a third-floor porch; questions such as "Like to take in a movie? How about a date? Want to translate some French? Aren't you going to class?"—all are being answered in the positive negative, and why? Because Sally and Jane and Betty and numerous others have just gotta take a sunbath. Hour upon hour of patient sunning! Minutes wasted scrubbing away iodined baby oil! Days spent with agonizing burns! Is it worth it? Just ask that favored minority who have braved the ordeal and successfully emerged with skins of golden brown. Now their cry is "Down with the lily-white angels!" Don't be surprised to hear any day that this new requirement has been added to our curriculum: "To graduate, a Meredith student must have four semesters of suntan." Who knows? Some day this fad may replace Phys. Ed!

Sun Shines First Time in Four Years

Meredith College has just experienced a bright, sunny May Day for the first time in four years. On Saturday, May 1, Queen Mary Dell Fales reigned over a gay and colorful afternoon of festivities. The Queen carried a bouquet of purple iris, and the attendants carried American Beauty roses.

The theme for the day was "The Pipes of Pan." Dances were given by the folk dance classes and the creative rhythms group. There was the traditional winding of the May Pole.

High school seniors were invited for the weekend as guests of the college. On Saturday night there was a party honoring the visitors. The day's activities closed Saturday at 10:00 p.m. when the B. S. U. Council, with Betsy Ann Morgan in charge, presented a candlelight service in the court.
