

Alumna Has Exhibit Here

On display in the art gallery are some of Miss Fannie Memory Farmer's most recent oil paintings. Mr. Colson, in arranging the exhibit, has placed beneath each painting a smaller Medieval painting by which is shown the influence of Medieval art upon Miss Farmer's work.

Miss Farmer, an alumna of Meredith and a past editor of THE TWIG, has several other claims of connection with Meredith. The niece of Dr. Mary Lynch Johnson, she is moreover the granddaughter of Dr. Livingston Johnson, for whom Johnson Hall was named. Her mother is a member of the board of trustees at Meredith, and she herself taught history here for a year.

At present Miss Farmer is employed as Administrative Assistant to the Commissioner of Welfare. In her spare time she is studying the Russian language at State College. She has done graduate work both at the University of North Carolina, where she passed the bar and took her M.A. degree in history, and at Cornell.

Miss Farmer also professes interests in music, cooking, and travelling. She has travelled in Europe on two occasions.

Business Club Plans Trip to Richmond

The February meeting of the Tomorrow's Business Women was held in the S & W Cafeteria. After dinner Janne Dawson and Pat Pendergraft told the group of their first interviews with a business executive. Both had successful experiences. Pat plans to be employed in Waynesboro, Virginia, and Janne in Washington, D. C.

All business students who have taken retailing are interested in the approaching trip to Richmond, Virginia, to tour Miller and Rhodes Department Store. Miss Martha Hill and Miss Nellie Ellison will accompany

"Miss Student Teacher," Mary Jo Isaacs

Mary Jo Isaacs to Represent Meredith at NCEA Convention in March

At a recent meeting of the Education Club, Mary Jo Isaacs, was elected "Miss Student Teacher." This title gives Mary Jo the privilege of attending the annual convention of the North Carolina Education Association to be held in Asheville March 26-28. Mary Jo will be the only delegate from Meredith.

A transfer from Mars Hill, Mary Jo was there vice-president of the Nonpareil Society and a member of the forensic team. Her activities at Meredith include membership in the Education Club, the chorus, and Alpha Psi Omega, the dramatics fraternity. Mary Jo is vice-president of Alpha Psi Omega and a Student Government representative. They will leave for the trip on March 7, the date set for and a Student Government representative.

Mary Jo did her student teaching at Sherwood Bates, where her fourth graders were constantly asking, "Who's your boyfriend?" and "When are you going to get married?" She offers no enlightening comments to either question but says that next year she would like to teach the fourth grade in Winston-Salem or Forsythe County.

Mary Jo's favorite pastimes are swimming, horseback riding, and (according to her roommate) sleeping.

Angels Defeat Johnson Lambe By Seven Points on Home Court

The Meredith Angels fought their way to a 39-32 victory over Johnson Lambe on February 12. The game was played at 8:00 in the Meredith gymnasium. Playing for the Meredith team were Kay Johnson, Lib McRae, Loree Keen, freshmen who have won a place on the team, and Joyce Bailey, Ann Lovell, Ruth Jeanne Allen, Jane Williamson, Lucky Bell, Bonny Morgan, Catherine McRacken, Rebecca McRacken, Jean Pace, Gennie Keen, Jean Dula, and Bess Francis.

The Johnson Lambe team were leading at the half-time, but the Angels rallied and came out on top. Kay Johnson and Lib McRae were the outstanding players in the game.

The Athletic Association Board served cokes and doughnuts to both teams after the game.

Team Looks Good

Meredith's basketball team has a future if all appearances are indicative. Practices have been good, and the team has won the one game they have played. Coach Cunningham and Bonny Morgan, manager, hope to schedule games with Wake Forest, Campbell, Duke, and other teams. All games will be posted, and students are urged to support the team.

The Problems of a "Mrs." Shakespeare Causes Burnt Biscuits

By MARY JOE SINGH

I'm one of those hardy souls who go through college with an egg turner in one hand and a Shakespeare book in the other. I'm a "Mrs." facing the problem of being both a housewife and a student as I did two years ago when I was first married, I decided to tackle them one at a time before trying them both. It was a good idea too, because when I was a housewife I had the student problem conquered, and when I was a student I had the housewife problem solved. At any rate my husband, a State College student, and I were married just before my junior year at Meredith. We thought it wise that I become acquainted with the art of cooking (I was somewhat like the bride who couldn't boil water) before returning to school; so I didn't come back to school the first semester.

The culinary difficulties manifested themselves in burnt biscuits, burnt chicken, burnt peas, and burnt everything. I never undercooked anything.

Most couples have to wait some time before owning their home, but we began married life with our own little cottage, an economy-sized three room house in West Haven on the State College campus. The day we moved in we possessed one wing-back chair and a white Persian cat named Lady Macbeth. It was an interesting life. Having no hot water or a bathroom, we shared the community bathhouse with about fifty other couples. We were willing to try to overcome this handicap, but the lone cold water faucet we did have froze at the first hint of cold weather, the diminutive bedroom never got warm, and we had to lean forward every time we went from the kitchen to the bedroom because there was only half a door, half of the house having been attached to the other half on a steep hill. And I never did get used to trudging up that long hill in the cold chill of early morning to take a shower. And try packing twenty people into the matchbox-sized living room. After we acquired more furniture, we had to move it out of the living room so the people who came to see us could squeeze in.

When I returned to school last year in February, the confusion
