cares, and, for a few brief moments, the audience flew to a land of dreams.

The faculty at Meredith also underwent a transfiguration. Forgotten were irregular verbs, logarithms, un-corrected themes, The French Revolution, and A minors. With the wave of a magic wand, they became Alice with a lilting voice and long flowing hair, The White Rabbit, always in a tremendous hurry to please the King and Queen of Hearts, the Mad Hatter with unanswerable riddles, the White Knight on a green horse, Tweedledum and Tweedledee, the rude Cheshire Cat and all of the beloved characters from Alice in Wonderland.

It was as if the days since childhood were flipped away, and once more the audience was able to accompany Alice on her mysterious flight into fantasy. The Doremouse, the March Hare, the Gryphon, and the Walrus lived as they never had before, except perhaps many years ago in the sparkling eyes of a little child as he listened to his grandmother read. Alice's gay chatter with Humpty Dumpty brought both tears and laughs of reminiscence. Why, even the riddle "I breathe when I sleep; I sleep when I breathe" made sense once more!

The faculty and administration of Meredith College are to be recommended highly on their production. It was taken to the hearts of the Meredith girls and shall always remain there. And, when the time comes once more to talk of shoes and ships and sealing wax, the future generations of students will love it as much as the present one did.
