The Cyclist

by Kelly Wallace

Gretchen Holt, a freshman here at Meredith, has a special talent that has given her a possible chance of a lifetime. She is a champion sprint cyclist and has been invited to train at the Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, Colorado.

Holt recently placed fourth in the Junior Women's Omnium which consists of three events: the Middle distance, Long distance, and the Sprint, in which Gretchen placed first. She will move into the Senior Women's competition this year. Because this competition has no omnium, Gretchen may concentrate on her specialty, sprinting, and go for national fame.

"One reason I was given an invitation is because I will be a first year senior rider. The coaches will be able to train me for one event, sprints, instead of three different events that are in the Junior Women's Omnium," Holt commented. She also said, "I would love to go out to Colorado Springs, it would be a chance in a lifetime, but I also want to maintain my student status at Meredith."

Another problem Gretchen is facing is the need for sponsors. The trip to Colorado and equipment will cost around 5,000 dollars and she's having trouble finding sponsors to support her. "Unless I get some sponsors, I can't afford to go to O.T.C. (Olympic Training Center)." She has contacted WRAL in Raleigh for possible sponsorship and she is still hopeful.

Peace Group To Meet

by Elizabeth Almond

There's something missing in Belfast, Ireland. Ask the little children why they can't play outside anymore and they'll probably tell you because it's not there. You won't find it in stormy Johannesburg in South Africa and it will elude you on the border of Iran and Iraq. It's not in Havana with Castro or in Moscow with Gorbachev. Nicaragua has been without it for far too long. What is it? Peace. The next question is: What are Meredith students going to do about restoring Peace to the four corners of the world? It's not a futile question. You're not alone if you feel powerless to do anything about the world's situation. Most people do. The truth is that your voice can be heard, that you have the power to bring about the changes that will make this world a safer place to be. Sitting in your dorm room worrying about a nuclear holocaust won't change anything. Here at Meredith a group of students are going into action. On October 11th at 10:00 a.m. in Jones Chapel Commons Room, the first meeting of the Peace-making club will come to order. At that time we will discuss the issues of war and peace that affect us today. Everyone is invited to come and air opinions, ideas, and fears about the unrest that exists in our world today. Perhaps our sparks of hope will ignite a flame of protest that will spread like a roaring fire to the rest of the world. Isn't it worth a try?

Everyone is welcome, so please join the rest of the chapter for good company, good information and good food.

Spellbound

by Mary Mills

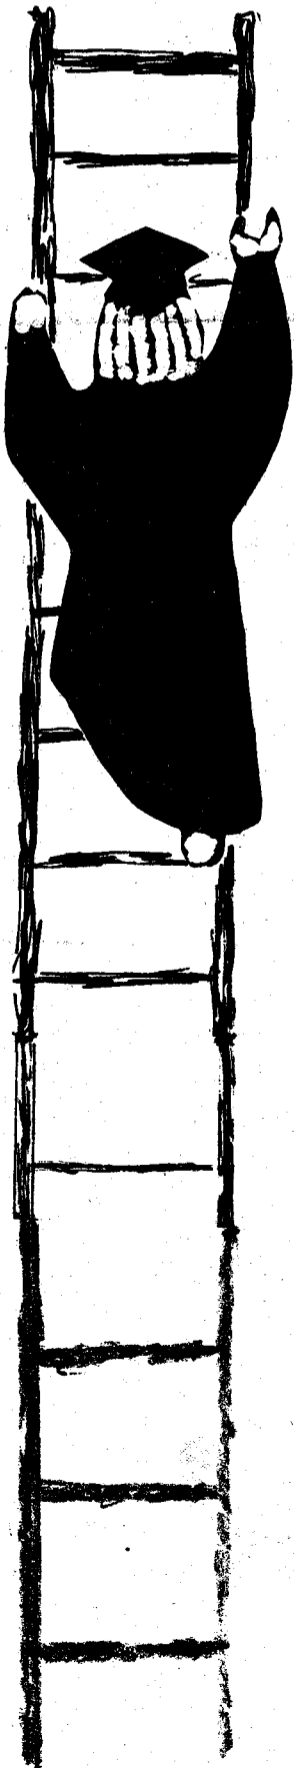

Are you ready to be mesmerized, energized and hypnotized all in the same evening and all by the same person? Then get ready for the Tom DeLuca Show, a combination of comedy and hypnotism that make up one of the most requested acts on college campuses today. Tom DeLuca, who appeared on the Meredith campus last September, is returning for a "command performance". This night of captivating entertainment will take place in Jones Auditorium on Wednesday, October 16 at 8:00 p.m. Admission will be $2 per person.

Tom DeLuca is certainly not an ordinary stage hypnotist. He received his Masters Degree in Psychology from Sageman State University in Illinois in 1978. He spent several years as a clinical hypno-therapist and seminar instructor before he started touring about six years ago. Tom draws from his educational background to make his show a top quality, high energy event.

The show is an unique experience for everyone there. The audience is amazed as some fifteen volunteers are simultaneously placed under hypnosis to give graphic and humorous proof of the power of the mind. So, if you want to be a part of an adventure into the world of abounding comedy and tantalizing hypnotism mark October 16 on your calendar now!
