Meredith Volleyball Team Has Chance at NCAA

The Meredith Volleyball Team is 16-4 going into their final match against Greensboro College Monday, October 28. The Angels have had a wonderful season so far and are anxiously waiting to hear if they will get a bid to the NCAA tournament.

Last Saturday Meredith played two very tough teams — St. Andrews and ACC. The pressure was on for the Angels to perform, and they did just that. Dr.

Chamblee felt that the match against St. Andrews was the best match Meredith has played in two years! Overall the Angels have played well all year, having only a few lapses. In the Chowan game Friday night, the Angels just couldn't seem to pull it together, but they managed to get back at Chowan on their home territory last Tuesday night. Both Catonsville Community College and Chowan Junior College are ranked better than 17 in the nation. The Angels feel that if they had a second chance to play Catonsville they would certainly beat them. Of the four losses on Meredith's record, Catonsville is the only team that the Angels have not beat. This being the case, it looks as though the Meredith Volleyball Team should have a good chance at getting a bid to the NCAA.

chaplains who are active in each branch are Southern Baptist women, according to McGuire. Her interest in the Navy spring from her brother's enlistment and the excitement of others already in the chaplaincy program. McGuire relishes the thought of being a "missionary in uniform." Even as a child McGuire was beginning to develop an interest in the military. She remembers flipping through the encyclopedia and studying the different branches of the armed services. "I was particularly interested in what the women did, wore and were called," McGuire recalls.

Although McGuire admits her "struggle is dealing with the unknown," she tries to live for the present and let tomorrow take care of itself.

For relaxation McGuire enjoys travelling, cycling, water and snow skiing and driving. "I like to be alone and when I am alone I appreciate it," says McGuire as the telephone rings and a student announces she will be right over to pick up a discount movie ticket. "I like to drive alone. It's the time for me." McGuire also enjoys travelling alone when possible.

When asked her philosophy of life, McGuire responds with a smile, "you can be who you want to be through motivation and determination."

Dulaney said that the characteristics of a liberal arts graduate is a person who is an active lifelong learner, a skilled communicator, in touch with the present, and sensitive to ethical dimensions. In other words, a student interested in entering the business world needs to learn, relate and choose, along with being able to think, reason and form a judgment.

The purpose of a liberal arts degree is not to get a job, but to better equip students to deal with life.
