TBW Members Receive Pointers

By assessing your weaknesses and strengths, you are better able to capitalize on your talents.

Tomorrow's Business Women held its second meeting of the year on October 23. The speaker for the evening was Ms. SueAnn Scoonderwoerd, a financial specialist for MONY Associates.

Ms. Scoonderwoerd, a former Meredith graduate, taught mathematics in Fairfax County for 17 years before entering the field of finance. She left the field of education because she wanted to be in a situation where she was being paid for her performance. In finance, "if you work hard, you are compensated in pay," Scoonderwoerd said.

Ms. Scoonderwoerd's presentation was filled with helpful advice to those interested in the field of finance, as well as those entering other fields. Among the many helpful pointers given, Scoonderwoerd emphasized the importance of knowing yourself. Also, Scoonderwoerd emphasized that in a situation where you are working with people, it is important to understand them. You need to be sensitive to other people's feelings, abilities, and values in order to deal with them effectively.

A winner of a host of awards, the MONY Associate of the Year Award, and the MONY Top Producer Support Award (just to name a few), Ms. Scoonderwoerd attributes most of her success to Meredith. "Meredith gives you great opportunities to appreciate life and gain confidence," she said. Scoonderwoerd's final message to TBW members was, "Take advantage of whatever you can!"

Described by The New York Times as "perhaps the most distinguished of America's 'new generation' of quartets", the Emerson String Quartet is perhaps the only quartet performing today whose violinists share the position of first violinist. The Emerson's broad repertoire embraces the complete cycles of Beethoven and Bartok, as well as standard and contemporary music.
