

Bonnie Phillips, who heads up the Juvenile Restitution Program in Carteret County, says volunteers are urgently needed to serve as on-site supervisors for the program. The idea of the program is to enable juvenile offenders to develop a greater sense of self-worth and community pride by performing community service at selected worksites. Money that is earned by the juvenile is used by the clerk of court to provide at least partial recompense to victims for the damages they have suffered. It is hoped that the program will aid in reducing crime in the community and protect society while working to redirect the work of the juvenile offender. Those willing to contribute any number of hours per week to the program are urged to contact Bonnie Phillips at 728-7350.

-----

A workshop on fishprinting will be held at the Marine Resources Center on Thursday, October 25 at 7 p.m. Scott Mair will teach participants how to make prints of fish, shells and other objects by using the Japanese Gytaku method. The program is free and the public is invited. Materials will be furnished.

-----

The listing of Joan Dawson as associate editor of Shore Line is in recognition of work well done for the past several months. It reminds me of the first publisher for whom I worked who was generally referred to by the staff as "that tight S-O-B." We used to say he was so tight that in recognition of merit and hard work he'd give you a title instead of a raise. Unfortunately, circumstances force Shore Line to do the same thing. Joan will receive the same stupendous salary as the editor -- $1 a year.

-----

Did you ever stop to think how meaningless your life would be if you could not read or write? If you could not derive the comfort that comes from reading your Bible? Suppose you could not learn a little of what is going on in the world from reading your newspapers, magazines or books. Suppose you could not read street signs, highway signs or advertising signs. Imagine how it would be if you had to ask someone to read you your pay check.

TEACHERS NEEDED FOR ILLITERATES

There are people right here in Carteret County who can do none of these things. According to census estimates 38 percent, about 15,000, of Carteret County adults are illiterate. The Carteret Library Literacy Council has embarked on a campaign to eradicate this evil and needs your help. It has 43 volunteers to tutor these people but needs many, many more because one tutor teaches one student.

A workshop to train volunteers will be held on October 26th and 27th at the United Methodist Church in Morehead City. Mary Talbert of Laubach Literacy in Raleigh will conduct the workshop from 6:30 to 10 p.m. on Friday, October 26 and from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday October 27th.

There is no charge for books and other materials to tutors or students, but participants should bring their lunch on Saturday.

Sites for the tutoring is now being obtained in each community in Carteret County. Those interested in volunteering or needing further information should call 728-2050.

-----

You may have noticed the new sprouting of hair on Richard Evans' face. It's because he is getting set to portray King Arthur in the Carteret Community Theatre's production of Camelot. The play will be presented in the West Carteret High School Auditorium on Friday and Saturday, November 16 and 17 and November 23 and 24 at 8 p.m. and on Sunday, November 18 and 25 at 3 p.m.

Richard's wife, Carolyn plays mischievous Morgan Le Fey. The company promises those who attend "one brief shining moment that is known as Camelot."