Meet the Editor

By Jacquie Pipkin

Janie Price comes to The Shoreline with a wealth of knowledge and experience, not only in technical but in practical matters. For 28 years she worked at the office of U.S. News & World Report in Washington, DC, beginning as a typesetter and retiring as Director of Editorial Technology. Janie still travels to Washington periodically as a consultant for the magazine and to help produce annual publications, Best Colleges and Best Graduate Schools. Janie was attracted to The Shoreline not only because of her passion for publishing but her need for deadlines. Yes, she admitted that she actually missed having deadlines.

Janie grew up in Johnston County, NC, where she married her high school sweetheart, Jerry Price. Immediately after high school graduation, she joined Jerry in Providence, Rhode Island, where he was stationed with the Marines. After a year in Providence, they relocated to northern Virginia where Jerry was stationed at the Marine Corps base in Quantico. Janie commuted to her job with an insurance agency in Washington. Her curiosity and drive took her to a lobbying firm where she discovered she could "type like the wind" and produce pages and pages of documents with no errors. After a few years with the lobbying firm, she decided to pursue employment in publishing. Her typing speed and willingness to work without pay until she mastered the principles of typesetting landed the job with a small firm that produced magazines and books.

After his service in the Marines, Jerry went to George Mason University (GMU) to study criminal justice. During that time, Janie learned that the U.S. News & World Report needed a typesetter and a fast typist to work second shift. Many know what happened next.

After graduating from GMU, Jerry joined the U.S. Secret Service, eventually serving on the protective details for Presidents Reagan and Bush. In addition to his normal presidential protective duties, he was a member of President Reagan's equestrian detail, joining the president on rides at Camp David and at his California ranch. When he joined President Bush's detail, he also served as a boat handler when the president was vacationing in Kennebunkport, Maine.

The Prices retired to Pine Knoll Shores in 2005 to the house on Holly Road that they had purchased in 2002 and used as their vacation home. Like so many of us, vacations in the area led to plans to retire here. The Prices are no less active in retirement than they were during their professional careers. In addition to staying

The Pink Luncheon 2014

By Rhonda Chused and Rhonda Scibal

Once again, the Dunes Club in Atlantic Beach will be adorned in pink on Friday, October 24, to raise money for the UNC Lineberger Comprehensive Cancer Center in Chapel Hill. Thanks to so many of you, the Pink Luncheon was a huge success last year. We hope you will support this worthwhile effort again this year.

UNC Lineberger is one of the leading cancer centers in the nation and has been rated as exceptional, the highest category, by the National Cancer Institute. The center brings together some of the most gifted physicians and scientists in the country to research and improve the prevention, early detection and treatment of cancer.

Our keynote speaker this year will be Dr. Hyman Muss. Dr. Muss is currently Professor of Medicine at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill, and Director of Geriatric Oncology at the Lineberger Comprehensive Cancer Center. His major research interests are breast cancer, with emphasis on the treatment of older women, issues related to treatment of all older cancer patients and providing education in geriatrics to fellows in training. With his colleagues, Dr. Muss is trying to define the role of molecular factors, as well as geriatric assessment, in optimizing treatments for older patients with cancer. Earlier this year, the Kay Yow Cancer Fund, in partnership with The V Foundation for Cancer Research, awarded Dr. Muss a $1 million women's cancer research grant to evaluate the impact of physical activity among breast cancer survivors.

Susan Collins, executive director of the Carteret General Hospital Foundation, and Rodney Kemp, co-chairman of the capital campaign, will also be speaking about the partnership in cancer care between Carteret General Hospital and the UNC Lineberger Comprehensive Cancer Center.

Lineberger enhances our community's medical and radiation oncology services at Carteret General by giving patients access to clinical trials and treatment planning while being seen here, close to home, and streamlining the process for patients who may seek second opinions at UNC Cancer Care.

Come join us for a wonderful lunch, fashion show, raffles and, of course, lots of door prizes. If you would like information regarding a reservation for the luncheon (tickets are $50) or information about making a donation or being a sponsor, please contact us at any of the following: The Pink Luncheon, PO Box 579, Atlantic Beach, NC 28512; thepinkluncheon@gmail.com; 342-2558 (Rhonda Chused); or 422-4088 (Rhonda Scibal).

Come and join us. We can make a difference.
