Believed the biggest codfish on record, a cod caught off Massachusetts in 1895 weighed about 211 pounds and was more than six feet long.

DELIVERY OF WAR BONDS THRU PAYROLLS

There are about 3,000 employees of the Marshall Field organization buying war bonds through the payroll allotment plan. This entails a great deal of additional work in the accounting department. This department is arranging to purchase these bonds for the employees once a month—about the 15th of the month. By this method there will be some delay between the time enough money is collected to buy the bond and the delivery to the worker. To purchase these bonds weekly as they are paid for would put a great deal more work on the accounting department, and it is hoped that this slight delay will be satisfactory to all of the bond purchasers.
