Draper Service Men Honor Roll Sign

This splendid testimonial to the Draper boys who have joined Uncle Sam's armed forces was erected by Draper people with money raised by popular subscription. E. W. Mooney and John R. McGavish were the men who originated and put across the idea. Glen Boyles, talented painter, designed and painted the board, which attractively carries out the red, white and blue motif. The board, as yet unfinished, carries the names of 98 young men in the army, four in the marines and 58 in the navy, a total of 160 young men—70 percent of them volunteers.

Draper has a right to be proud of this testimonial—one of the very few yet erected.
