INTERESTING EXHIBIT COMING HERE SOON

The Industrial Incentive Division, Navy Department, has prepared two trucks for an extensive tour of the important industrial towns in the South. This mobile unit consists of one truck containing cotton goods, the other truck contains captured Jap, German, and Italian equipment. Workers will have an opportunity to compare their own goods with those manufactured by the enemy.

The exhibit will be in charge of Lt. J. M. Ryan, District Industrial Incentive Officer. He will be accompanied by four recently returned combat victims who will relate their experiences with cotton goods in action.

This mobile unit, which will tour Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, and Alabama, will be here the week of September 18th. Due to unforeseen changes of schedule, weather, or unavoidable delay it is not known the exact day and hour the exhibit will be here but every effort will be made to inform workers as to the date, for it is believed many will wish to view this exhibit, particularly the captured enemy equipment.

After seeing this exhibit and hearing the returned veterans workers will have a better idea as to the vital importance of the textile industry in war.

Second Ditto—No, I'm not. The boss hasn't complimented me on anything but my work.

Colonel (after reviewing troops): "What's the idea of parading all the big men in front of the little men?"

Lieutenant: "It's the Sergeant's fault. He used to run a fruit store."
