

Former Fieldcrest Man To Teach Foremanship At Evening College

E. G. Michaels, II, formerly of Fieldcrest Mills, management consultant, J. D. Woods and Gordon, Inc., will teach a course in foremanship training at the Greensboro Evening College during the winter quarter. The course will meet one night per week, Monday, beginning January 10 and ending March 14. The tuition, including all charges, is $15.

The course entitled "The Foreman—Personal Qualities" is open to foremen and prospective foremen in industrial and commercial plants in Greensboro and surrounding area.

FOLKS YOU KNOW

Goldie Amos, Jacquard weaver at the Rayon Mill, is a native of West Virginia. She first joined the Company in the Remnant Room at the old American Warehouse in 1924. She later worked in the winding department at the Rayon Mill but has been in the Weave Room since 1938, most of the time as a weaver. Mrs. Amos weaves material for the famous Cel-O-Sheen tablecloths and napkins.

When outside the mill, her chief interests are her home in Carolina Heights and the girls' Sunday school class at the Brethren church which she has taught for several years. Her husband, Clyde Amos, works in the Slashing Dept. at the Sheeting Mill. They have one daughter, Helen, who is Mrs. Edward Rickman, of Norfolk, Va.

★
Think first and be safe.

BEARERS OF GIFTS:—Left to right above: Inez Williams, Hazel Thomasson, Hilda Sherron, Marine Cook, J. F. Byrd, Louise Landress, and Irene Aheron.

Lower picture, left to right: Sam B. Rhodes, Jr., Herbert Pratt, and Marvin Clifton.

Laboratory Group Plays Santa Claus To Needy Family

The Research and Quality Control laboratories dispensed with their usual Christmas party this year and played Santa Claus to a needy family in this area. Bearing loads of packages, groceries, clothing and toys for the children the entire laboratory personnel delivered the gifts in person late in the afternoon of December 23.

The gifts from the Fieldcrest group represented the only Christmas cheer available to the family involved. The family had no Christmas last year. The farm family consists of the ailing father, the mother, daughters nine and six years old, and a little son three years old. The three-year-old boy is in precarious health and recently underwent an expensive operation, adding to the family's financial difficulties.

The gifts included dolls and tea sets for the girls, an air gun and a red toy truck for the boy (the first such items he'd ever seen) and new clothing for the entire family. Money to apply on the hospital bill was enclosed in a Christmas card. The boxes of groceries were topped off with a fruit cake and candy and nuts.

★
When unsetting the table, stack dishes orderly in place to be washed so that they will not have to be moved or re-stacked before washing.

Home Economics Group Visits Rug Mill Today

The Karastan Rug Mill will be host to approximately 15 home economics teachers from schools in the county Monday, January 10. The mill tour was an outgrowth of the open house held at Fieldcrest Mills during October when some of the teachers visiting the mills at that time requested that the home economics teachers be allowed to visit the mills in a body. Miss Betty Austin, of Leaksville High School, will head the group.

Soldier's Address

The Mill Whistle has received a nice communication from a former employee now stationed overseas with the Army. For the benefit of those friends who wish to write him, his new address is: Pvt. Floyd A. Meeks, RA 44017918, 707 Ord. Maint. Co., A.P.O 7, c/o Postmaster, San Francisco, California.

★
A new use for leftover wallpaper: Line cupboard shelves with it. If the colors are not in harmony with your kitchen put the figured side down.

★
A chance taker is an accident maker.