A Moral Here For Inventors

When Alexander Graham Bell inventor of the telephone, wrote in 1878 that some day "wires will unite different cities, and a man in one part of the country may communicate by word of mouth with another in a distant place," people thought he was crazy.

Today we have 48,000,000 telephones, an average of 148,000,000 "word of mouth" communications every day—and 700,000 people supplied with jobs, in 21 of the telephone companies.

Here's to the man who plans things,
Builds things, makes things;
Who prates not of wonders of old,
Nor gloats upon ancestral gold,
But takes off his coat and takes a-hold
And does things!

Members Of The Fieldcrest Team

HOWARD NEAL,
Blanket Weaver

By striving for high production and good quality, Mr. Neal plays an important part in the operation of the Blanket Mill. Without good weavers a mill could not long remain in business. To be a good weaver requires considerable "know-how" and skill. It is not enough for him to make high production unless the quality is good, nor can he concentrate on quality to such an extent that he won't get production. Through training, experience and attentiveness to the job, a successful weaver like Mr. Neal produces good quality and keeps waste to a minimum while maintaining efficient production.

KATHERINE MANLEY,
Switchboard Operator

As switchboard operator and receptionist in the Nantucket building, Spray, Mrs. Manley can help or hurt the reputation of Fieldcrest Mills depending upon her treatment of visitors and of persons who make telephone calls to the mills. Her pleasant voice and courteous manner are assets to the Company because many people get their first impression of Fieldcrest through contact with her. Mrs. Manley is the first Fieldcrest employee that salesmen and other visitors meet and she is the first contact that townspeople and persons at distant places have when they telephone the mills.
