

Members of the Fieldcrest Team

Patsy Barker, whose job is inspecting and folding fitted sheets, performs a responsible work for the Bleachery. She makes the final inspection and therefore is the last person to see the entire sheet before it gets to the retail customer.

She must know our quality standards and the different grades of sheeting manufactured by Fieldcrest. She must give close attention to her work and exercise good judgment. Any mistakes she made would be costly.

Through experience, good eyesight, expert judgment and a conscientious attitude, she performs this important work well and thereby contributes to the successful operation of her mill and the Company as a whole.

Merle Hunter, key punch operator in Tabulating Dept., at the General Office, punches and verifies cards for all shipments of goods to customers and for production. The cards are used in electronic tabulating machines to prepare various reports for the Accounting Dept., and for sales analysis.

Accuracy is of the utmost importance. Any error she made would be reflected all the way through to the Company's balance sheet. To perform her work correctly and on time requires close attention to the job, a good knowledge of the operation, and an understanding of the importance of what she is doing. By careful and efficient work she contributes to the success of the Company.

Midwest Press Group Tours Karastan Rug Mill

Approximately 75 representatives of the Midwest Press association toured the Karastan Rug Mill Saturday afternoon, December 1, preceding their annual banquet meeting, held in Burton Grove school cafeteria. Picture shows one of the groups as they observe the beaming process. Operator shown is Gordon Land, C. B. Barham, foreman of the Setting Department, guide for the group, is shown at center.
