Guards Qualify As First Aid Instructors

Four of the Burns guards at Fieldcrest were among the local-area persons completing the recent Red Cross first aid instructor's course. Receiving certificates were Sgt. Randall Dyer and Guards Charles Carrington, Jr., Cleatus Tulloch, Sr. and Hubert Cochran.

The 15-hour course was taught by Russell H. Tagert, Jr., a Red Cross volunteer instructor from Greensboro.

The guards were congratulated by C. J. Frank, Jr., director of industrial relations at Fieldcrest, for their interest and unselfishness in giving of their time to obtain knowledge to impart information that may save lives, reduce suffering and build positive attitudes for safer living.

Les Kittredge, manager of Burns' Richmond, Va., office, also sent congratulations, pointing out that the Burns organization stresses the importance of safety and first aid. He recalled that some of the guards at Fieldcrest already have put their training to good use in helping injured persons.

All of the guards at Fieldcrest have completed at least the standard first aid course, several have taken the advanced course and, with the training of the latest group, seven of the guards are certified Red Cross first aid instructors.
