Bedsread Group Enjoys 'Safety Break'

Employees of the Yarn Preparation Department at the Bedsread Mill, Eden, enjoyed a "safety break" recently in celebration of their completion of a half-million man-hours without a lost-time accident.

The supervisors served free pastry and free coffee and cold drinks to all employees of the department on all three shifts.

Harold Thackston, foreman, congratulated the employees on their good safety performance and urged them to continue their efforts in the prevention of accidents.

The record shows that the last disabling injury occurred in the department in April, 1966. Through May 30, 1969, the employees had accumulated 508,000 safe man-hours and are continuing their accident-free record to date.

Joseph L. Cook Completes ICS Course In Supervision

Joseph L. Cook, an industrial engineer at the Columbus Towel Mill, Columbus, Ga., recently completed an industrial supervision course through International Correspondence Schools.

Mr. Cook took the course on his own initiative with the objective of self-improvement.

Ronald D. Clark, dean of the faculty of ICS, in speaking of Mr. Cook's achievement, said, "The employee who spends leisure time in job-related training is preparing for bigger things ahead and realizes that increased ability is a most valuable asset."

"The ICS certificate or diploma, issued upon completion of a course, shows evidence not only of knowledge acquired, but also points out many other very desirable character traits—ambition, determination, persistence, seriousness of purpose, self-reliance, and the willingness to meet problems and to think them through to a solution.

"The ICS certificate or diploma is evidence that a person has become more valuable through his own efforts."
