'Susie' Reminds Bedsread Mill Employees Of Safety Equipment

"Susie", a rag doll, is reminding Bedsread Mill employees of the importance of wearing personal protective equipment to avoid injuries on the job.

The doll was created by Catherine Cochran, a Bedsread Mill Inspecting Department employee who has almost 30 years of continuous service with the Company.

She made "Susie" out of bedsread remnants during her break periods. She equipped the doll with safety glasses, safety shoes and ear muffs and made a sign giving safety tips to go with it.

She got the idea at her department's monthly safety meeting and Elmira Priddy, first shift supervisor of the Bedsread Cloth Room, encouraged her in the project.

Mike Booth, Bedsread Mill training coordinator, quickly saw that it would be helpful for "Susie" to visit other departments in the mill.

Mr. Booth said, "We are trying to create a 'safety conscious' attitude among employees by displaying numerous safety posters and by having safety talks with all employees. We think that Susie will serve a purpose in reminding employees to wear their personal protective equipment while on the job."
