EDITORIAL

With the completion of examinations marking the termination of another semester, we are looking forward to the new semester as one who opens a new book, scanning the pages eagerly and seeking each unread page with pleasurable anticipation. Unlike the reader of a book who can do no more than read what has been written by another, we are writing our own book. Each page contains just what we may place there, and the concluding chapter depends upon us alone. At the close of the semester when we read the finished book, will we close it with a sigh of despair or contentment? Will we feel like closing the book forever, or will we reread it many, many times, remembering with pride and joy all that went into the making of such a book?

The book will be a short one, for so little time remains--so little time for the beginning of new projects, for the completion of all that has been begun, for the making of new friendships and for the broadening of old ones. When we look over the material to be included, we realize what a difficult task is ours.

Of course, every book has its comedy and pathos, its pages of happiness and of sadness. Situations

SPORTS

Wednesday night, January 19, one of the best basket-ball games ever witnessed in Montreat was played between the Junior College, Junior and Freshman High School, and Senior College and Senior and Sophomore High School. The game was fast and very close during the entire period of play. The Juniors and Freshmen won 22-19, but not without a hard fight.

Sealy was high scorer with 12 points, and Segars and Andrews were runners-up with 7 points each. E. Woodruff, Dunn, and P. Hill were out-standing guards.

Summary of the game is as follows:
