MOSCOW SUPPORTING SPANISH TERRORISTS

Madrid, Spain: From this vantage point, one can trace the long arm of the Soviet-Cuban supported international terrorist network to the increasing assassinations of Spanish military and security officers.

The principal group involved in the killings is the nationalist underground ETA, a Marxist-Leninist Basque terrorist organization whose avowed aim is to create an independent socialist Basque nation. Their assassinations have jumped from 11 in 1977 to 64 in 1978, 79 in 1979, and 317 in 1980. At their present rate of killing, the total for 1981 will reach 400. Evidence gathered by Spanish security officials here clearly shows that hundreds of ETA's assassins have been trained in Cuba, Algeria, and South Yemen, while being armed and financed by the Soviet Union. This international dimension of Spanish terrorism was highlighted recently by Foreign Minister Leopoldo Calvo Sotelo, who charged that the violence was directed at preventing Spain from becoming a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO). The Spanish leader has told foreign diplomats here that Andrei A. Gromyko, the first Soviet Foreign Minister to visit Madrid, even indicated the link in an extraordinary private offer in November, 1979.

If Spain discontinued its plans to join NATO, Gromyko reportedly said, the Soviet Union would be prepared to help in combating Spain's most trying domestic problem, terrorism. Gromyko then implied that a decision to go forward with NATO membership could leave Spain's young democracy vulnerable to more terrorist actions.

After Spanish officials made it clear that they planned to continue to try to join NATO, large amounts of Soviet-built arms began arriving covertly in Spain for the terrorists. The number of assassinations of government security officials then jumped by 400%.

Long Soviet Involvement
Soviet involvement and support for terrorists here go back long before Gromyko issued his blunt threat.

Investigations by Spanish security officials have documented that the first batch of Basque terrorists went to Cuba in 1964 after the Russians decided to increase their investment in terrorism abroad.

From Cuba, the ETA terrorists fanned out to train with the Tupamaros in Uruguay and like-minded Montoneros in Argentina. They then moved on to Algeria, whose guerrilla camps were opened wide to other European terrorist groups and members of the PLO. Cuban instructors were there from the start, and in the late 1960s advisers from the KGB, the Soviet secret police showed up.

In 1971, Spanish intelligence reports, the KGB instructors in Algeria brought the ETA and the Provisional IRA (the Irish terrorists) together for combined training. During the 1970s, several meetings between ETA terrorist leaders and KGB agents in southern France were monitored by Spanish intelligence. Eight Soviet diplomats and officials have been expelled from Spain since 1977 because of connections to Separatist groups in the Basque region of the Canary Islands.

This steady increase in Soviet-Cuban supported terrorism is seen here as the reason for the growing unrest among the Spanish military. Unless the government takes more forceful action, the military sees the possibility of a repeat of the Spanish civil war of the 1930s.

Despite their present overwhelming loyalty to the King and support for Spain's new democracy, it is very doubtful that the Spanish military will permit this to happen.

GOD, FAMILY, COUNTRY - IN THAT ORDER

armed in the holy cause of liberty, and in such a country as that which we possess, are invincible by any force which our enemy can send against us. Besides, Sir, we shall not fight our battles alone. There is a just God who presides over the destinies of nations, and who shall raise up friends to fight our battles for us. The battle, Sir, is not to the strong alone; it is to the vigilant, the active, the brave. Besides, Sir, we have not election. If we were base enough to desire it, it is now too late to retire from the contest. There is no retreat but in submission and slavery! Our chains are forged! Their clanking may be heard on the plains of Boston. The war is inevitable; and let it come! I repeat, Sir, let it come!

"It is in vain, Sir, to extenuate the matter. Gentlemen may cry, Peace, Peace! - but there is no peace. The war is actually begun! The next gale that sweeps from the North will bring to our ears the clash of resounding arms! Our brethren are already in the field! Why stand we here idle? What is it that gentlemen wish? What would they have? Is life so dear, or peace so sweet, as to be purchased at the price of chains and slavery? Forbid it, Almighty God! I know not what course others may take; but as for me, give me liberty or give me death!"

Our Most-Needed Weapon

Our nation was founded by men who believed in God, in individual freedom, in high moral values, in personal responsibility. Whether we survive as free men or slaves depends on whether we can resurrect our moral strength. We must fear slavery more than we fear war. We must fear Hell more than we fear poverty. The wages of wealth are comfort, complacency, caution, cowardice, compromise. As any fool should know, we can't possibly save the world unless we can save America. Missile strength, bombers, H-bombs, get the headlines, and we need more and better ones than the enemy. But the weapon we need most is spiritual strength. Who, we or the Communists, has the dedication, the fanatical zeal, the faith and works necessary to survive?

Which will make the most sacrifices and the least compromises? Let us remember that right is might. Why Not You?

Let us say with William of Orange: "There is one certain means by which I can be sure never to see my country's ruin - I will die in the last ditch."

Let us remember that ours is not just America's battle. Nor our personal battle. It is God's battle. Let us give battle joyously to the foes of Christianity, here and worldwide.

Francis Scott Key said in his Star Spangled Banner:

Praise the Power that hath made and preserved us a nation. Then conquer we must, for our cause it is just, And this be our motto: "In God is our trust." And the star-spangled banner in triumph shall wave O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave. God saves only nations which deserve to be saved. And all nations get the kind of government the people deserve. So don't look to the President, look to yourself. Who else? Why not you? You are the government. So let us hold, with Ten-nyson:

"Tho' much is taken, much abides; and tho' We are not now that strength which in old days Moved earth and heaven; That which we are, we are; One equal temper of heroic hearts, Made weak by time and fate, But strong in will To strive, to seek, to find, and not to yield."

Fifty-nine percent of the people in Puerto Rico get our food stamps. That's about 10 percent of our back-breaking food stamp expense going to Puerto Rico. And what do we get from Puerto Rico? Nothing worthwhile.

Black leftist Reverend Jesse Jackson's Push-Excel organization in Chicago has been paid nearly one million dollars of the taxpayers' money. And Ernest Green of the Carter Administration, 20 days before going out of office signed a federal grant for two million dollars more. The Reagan Administration plans to end the federal financing of the Reverend Mr. Jackson's leftist lecture bureau.

WHY JOHNI CAIN'T SPEL

By Edward S. Rankin, Executive Director Americanism Educational League, Buena Park, Calif.

"The different me and my parents they are more re-laxed Thin I am. So I like to Be more Taets thin they are They Drink more Thin me But I smok more Thin Them. I'm different Thin my parents Because I like To in Jouy Life more Thin They Do..."

Part of a freshman English essay, University of Nevada-Reno, 1980

The above is not by a grade school or high school student. It is part of a freshman essay, written by a University of Nevada-Reno student in 1980. Probably the same inability to spell and write a logical sentence could be found on almost any college campus in the United States. This is because the public education system, which is costing us more and more, is doing an ever less adequate job. It's because of the lack of discipline in the schools and a refusal to insist that certain basic standards be met before a student goes on to the next grade.

We have been prisoner for many years of the psychological nonsense that if you don't promote little Johnny or little Jane, even though they don't deserve to be promoted, it will hurt their egos and make them psychologically crippled.

This situation is so bad that large U.S. corporations are spending hundreds of millions of dollars to educate their employees so that they can function properly in a good-paying job.

Think of the complete waste, which in the end the consumer pays for. First of all, the taxpayer spends billions on education which is supposed to do the job. Then it has to be done all over again by businesses which, of course, charge the cost of that second education in the prices they charge for their goods. They have to!

In a recent Wall Street Journal article, a number of examples were cited. For instance, at JLG Industries, Inc., a manufacturer of cranes and aerial lifts in McCallsburg, Pennsylvania, "poorly educated workers are our No. 1 problem, the main factor slowing our growth," says William Barnes, vice president of finance.

One employee who didn't know how to read a ruler mismeasured yards and yards of steel sheet. "He wasted nearly $700 worth of material in one morning," Mr. Barnes said. Also, JLG purchased electronic equipment to help regulate inventories and manufacturing schedules. But employees who fed the equipment incorrect five-digit numbers were "wrecking havoc," Mr. Barnes said. As a result, wrong inventory numbers sent the wrong spare parts from the company's warehouse to manufacturing shops, disrupting both inventory control and
