INSIDE TV

BY CHRIS COLBY

CLOSEUP — "Fantasy Island" may have cornered the market on the most unusual in fantasies, but the series can't account for all of them. Checking around I uncovered the fantasies of some of the stars who have appeared on the series. Christopher George said he had fantasies about becoming an actor, adding, "I also always dreamed about meeting John Wayne, whom I idolized. I did become an actor, and what's even crazier, I not only met John Wayne but worked in five of his films." ... Luscious happy, for me to live forever, and to be able to fly with my hands." The moppet added, "I also want another baby sister or brother instead of a parrot for my birthday." ... Veteran actor Dane Clark said, "I wanted to get out of Brooklyn. I was pretty good at sports and thought maybe I would become an international athlete. Instead I became an actor." ... Gary Burghoff always wanted to be an actor. "When I was 5," he said, "I ran away from home to go to Hollywood, but I ran in the wrong direction. My mother found me 10 miles from the Atlantic Ocean curled up in a sewer pipe. The fantasy came true when I landed a running role in 'M*A*S*H.'"

Loni Anderson said, "I always wanted to be an Indian Princess. I really don't have blonde hair; it's black and my skin is olive. When I was little I thought living in tepees and wearing leather clothing and braids was the most wonderful way to live."

France Nuyen advised she always wanted to be a missionary. "But," added France, "I ended up being a minister (she was ordained in the Universal Church of Life). And I'm not in Africa as I fantasized, but I do work with battered and abused children here." ... Ten-year-old Missy Gold wants "everyone to be Barbi Benton always wanted to be a fairy princess and live in a big castle. "So now," said Barbi, "I live in Pegfair, a big old house in Pasadena. It was the Bicentennial house in Los Angeles. I also married the Prince." ... Hermione Baddeley, who also romped as Mrs. Naughton on "Maude," said, "I always liked titles and sure enough I married the Honorable David Tennant." Now divorced, Hermione was once Lady Tennant ... Barbara Parkins was born in Canada, "and," volunteered the brunette beauty, "Queen Elizabeth made a tour of Canada after she was crowned. I was standing on a corner in Vancouver as the Queen went by. One day I would like to live in England and meet her, I thought to myself. It ended up that I did move to England and did meet the Queen."

This fine Canadian-born actress has been starring in films for over ten years. Despite critical acclaim, her films seldom reached a wide audience. Now she is a star thanks to her role as a comic strip character. Who is she?

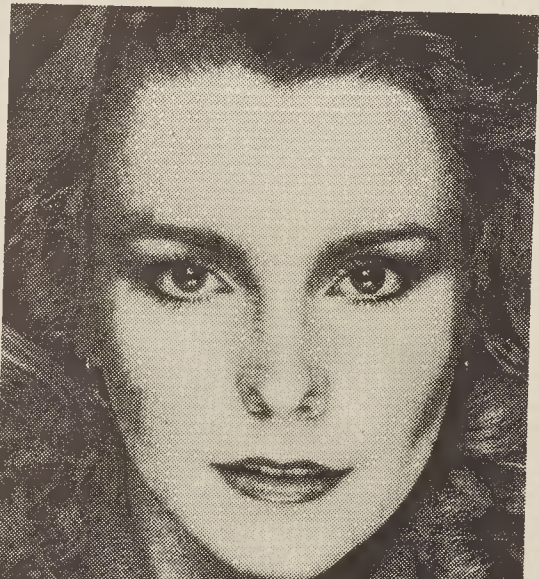

Margo (Lois Lane) Kibler

Sex and Soap's Singular Men — Does sex mature a guy? Or at least his image? You bet it does. Allen Fawcett (Kelly, "Edge Of Night") started his romantic romping with Jody (Lori Loughlin) and is now involved with Valerie (Leah Ayers), and as a result of his super stud work on the daytime sudser, he's gone from doing commercials for soft drinks and hamburgers to one for a nationally advertised beer ... Sex also does wonders for the already more mature man. Take James Mitchell who plays Palmer on "All My Children." His role requires him to make love to a much younger woman. "My mail," he says, "indicates that there are many women in the audience who would really appreciate the amorous attentions of an older man who not only seems to know what he's doing, but is secure enough to learn something new if he has to."

JULIE RIDLEY grabs attention as a surrogate mother in "As The World Turns."

Julie Ridley (Annie, "As The World Turns") gets loads of attention from fans these days now that her character's involved in a surrogate motherhood storyline. (A surrogate mother is a woman who agrees to be artificially inseminated and then to turn over the infant she bears to the natural father and his wife.) Julie is overwhelmed by the emotional nature of the response to her role on the show these days. "I think we touched a really raw nerve in that audience out there."

Rumors that Beverlee McKinsey (Iris, "Texas") may leave to tour in a play got a king-sized tut-tut from folks who reminded us Iris gets a blossoming romance in the weeks ahead ... Sing Happy Birthday to "Young & Restless" stars David Hasselhoff (Snapper, July 17), Dennis Cole (Lance, July 19) and K.T. Stevens (Vanessa, July 20) ... William Gray Espy (Mitch, "Another World") would like to do something more with his image on the show. Some say he wouldn't threaten to leave so often if he had a more consistently exciting storyline. Bill thinks being billed as a biller-and-cooer would be a coup for his career.

Tube Tip — Joanne (Mary Stuart "Search For Tomorrow") comes on with a new look to her character that will surprise Jo's longtime fans. She'll still be sweet, but with a touch of spice added.

ROCK TRACKS

Rolling Stones bassist Bill Wyman is suing London's "Daily Star" for libel. "The Star" published a piece claiming Wyman was about to leave the group, which Wyman vehemently denies ... Foreigner's new single, "Urgent," culled from the group's soon-due LP "4," was written by Mick Jones and features a solo by legendary saxophonist Jr. Walker ... Want to know what Elvis Presley enjoyed eating? Now we have "The Presley Family Cookbook," featuring such favorites as Country Opossum with Sweet Potatoes, Spam Sandwiches and Pepsi-Cola salad. Not exactly your standard gourmet fare ... "Edge of Night" soaper Sharon Gabet started a rock group of the same name and they are good. They've made several New York appearances and are now hoping for a recording contract ... Happy birthday to Carlos Santana, 34 July 20; Cat Stevens, same age a day later, and that rockin' Leo, Mick Jagger, 38 July 26 ...

Summer Meteorite

The second largest meteorite ever found in South Carolina is on permanent display in McKissick Museums at the University of South Carolina.

The huge "Summer" meteorite was recently purchased for $1,000 by the Columbia Gem and Mineral Society, the USC Educational Foundation and the USC Department of Geology.

A portion of the 70.8 pound meteorite, which was found in the Peak-Lite Mountain area, will be shared with the U.S. National Meteorite Collection at the Smithsonian Institution where it will be available to scholars around the world.

The Smithsonian will polish a face on the McKissick specimen to reveal its interior structure in return for a piece of the meteorite.

The Summer Meteorite was 'rediscovered' in 1980 by several USC undergraduate geology students who heard of a "large, strange" rock, said Dr. John Ernisee, curator of the L.L. Smith Geology Museum in McKissick.

Upon the advice of a native of the Peak-Lite Mountain area, the students visited the farm of Henry C. Summer, who showed them the metallic rock.

Later the meteorite was brought to the USC Geology Department and under the guidance of mineralogist Ed Sharpe, a fragment was removed from the specimen and sent to the Smithsonian where geologists confirmed that it was composed of 92 percent iron, about 7 percent nickel and about 1 percent cobalt and phosphorous.

Because of its size and because meteorites are rare in South Carolina, geology departments mineralogists worked with the Smithsonian curator to secure it for the university's collection. One year after its rediscovery, the meteorite is part of the "hands-on" exhibit in the L.L. Smith Geology Museum where it can be viewed as well as touched.

Scientists believe that meteorites come from the asteroid belt and represent fragments of planetary material remaining from the formation of the solar system.

It was once thought that they resulted from the disintegration of a planet, but it is now believed that they formed as small proto-planets.
