

FACED FIRING LINE.

A part of the base hospital force walked right up to the firing line when they visited Atlanta, Ga., last Friday. They even imagined that they could hear the cannons boom when they gathered before the mammoth painting of the battle of Atlanta and which renowned picture is the most gripping event for the men who went to the Georgia city to conduct several patients to the Fort McPherson hospital.

Making up the party was Captain Hacker, Sergeant Paulson, and Private Bennett, Sullivan, Teuton and Hagar.

"You must see the great painting of the battle of Atlanta. It holds 3,000 pounds of paint," the soldiers were told while on the train.

"I bet I ca' cover it a' wi' fifty pounds of white lead," disparaged Private "Scottie" Bennett, in charge of our hospital painting.

When the little party stood in front of that great panorama, where the battle lines seemed to stretch away into miles, Scottie was convinced.

"I canna' see where they ever got so much paint at a'," admitted Bennett.

Of course the men went through the Forth McPherson hospital and pronounce it a very neat institution.

The base hospital men also paused just outside of a prison camp, where 1,500 Germans are claimed to be interned. No communications were allowed, but Sergeant Paulson grinned broadly at the huns inside the high wire fence.

NOT THE WORSE

SHAFFER'S of The Cincinnati Post

NOTED CARTOONIST PICTURES THE LIFE.

When Claude Shafer, cartoonist for The Cincinnati Post and creator of "The Old Man Grump," visited the base hospital on Monday evening he gladly consented to draw an exclusive cartoon for The Caduceus.

"Life in the hospital, as I see it" is the official title of the sketch reproduced above from Shafer's drawing.

The cartoonist gave an evening's entertainment at the Base Hospital Y. M. C. A. Every number of his crayon sketches was warmly received.

Nettleton Military Footwear Extrordinary

The Nettleton Mounted Officer Boot

Made of rich cordovan superior quality and workmanship. Excels in appearance, fit and durability.

TATE BROWN CO.
MEMBERS OF
The Association of Army
And Navy Stores

Message:

If its a Nettleton, Its the best. Buy the boot that you know will give you dollar value for every dollar you pay--make your selection on a basis of quality.

In designs and construction every requirement of service, durability and comfort has been anticipated and carefully worked out by the Nettleton Co.

Military Men of America

Military footwear that will wear longest, afford greatest comfort and give the wearer an added touch of distinction on the field or in camp.

Officers uniforms made to measure in the tailoring department 2nd floor.

Short Strap Puttees. Style No. 25

Best quality cordovan or nut brown calf or cords. Calf superior in fit, finish and wearing quality. Also Spring front style.

The Tate-Brown Co.

Agents for Nettletons Military Footwear