BIG X-RAY SCHOOL

The Surgeon General of the Army, through the X-ray Division, has been engaged in organizing a school of military roentgenology at the Medical Officers' Training Camp, Fort Oglethorpe, Ga. This school supersedes and takes the place of a number of other schools on a much smaller scale previously in operation for instruction in X-ray work. All of the roentgenologists, who are officers of the Medical Corps, and X-ray manipulators, who are enlisted men in the Medical Department, will be trained at this new school, which is intended to give a thorough course of training in practical military roentgenology. The course will occupy about twelve weeks and there will be continuously under instruction about fifty officers and double that number of enlisted men. French experience has shown that about 600 roentgenologists are needed for every million of troops in the field and each of these officers will require at least two X-ray manipulators as assistants The course at Oglethorpe will cover X-ray physics, opera-tion of all types of X-ray apparatus used in the Army, thorough instruction in the localizing of foreign bodies and other special instruction in the practical application of this valuable aid to the military surgeon. Major Willis F. Manges, M.R.C., has been made director of the school and he and his staff will act as the instructors. The apparatus for the school equipment is very complete and the graduates will be prepared to fill all vacancies, wheth-er in the units now in the Service or in those which are to be formed.

Wilson—Why We Are At war. Wister—Pentecost of Calamity. Wood—Note-book of an Attache. Wood—Our Military History.
