CHIEF NURSE

"Camp Greene is the most attractive camp that I have seen," said Miss Susan Parish, who has been the chief nurse of the U. S. Army base hospital, Camp Greene, for two weeks, when asked her impressions of her new work.

MISS SUSAN G. PARISH.

"I like the pines and the rolling country with its bright green crops."

Miss Parish had been stationed at Camp Doniphan, Fort Sill, Okla., before being assigned to Camp Greene.

"I like Fort Sill, although many people have wondered why since the fort is located in the midst of the desert. There was something about the vastness of the blue-brown plain which held a spell. To look away off across the open and see a man walking along the horizon made him appear like he was walking on the rim of a bowl."

LEAVE FOR NEW YORK.

After an extended stay at the U. S. A. Base Hospital here, where they were stationed for preliminary training eight more of the reserve nurses left Camp Greene for New York City, where they are to remain for a week or two while awaiting transportation across the water. They are Miss J. Agnes Coakley, Miss Levina Irish, Miss Agnes Lee, Miss Marie McNiff, Miss Margaret O'Connor, Miss Meta Teerner and Miss Ethel Wilkins.

JOINS NO. 54 UNIT.

Miss Agnes Pierce left here very recently to join the other members of the Army Nurse Corps assigned to Base Hospital No. 54 now receiving instruction in drilling at New York City while awaiting orders to sail for the front on the other side of the water.

LIKED IT FINE.

In a certain military outfit in the Philippines any man who kicked about the food was given a chance to show how he could improve it by being put in charge of the mess.

The officer had the misfortune of being peculiarly successful during his tour and couldn't seem to raise a complaint from anybody.

One day, in desperation he threw a double handful of salt in the soup which the cook was preparing. When the soup was served officer after officer took one taste and in silence pushed away his plate. A late comer rushed in and took a mouthful of soup and howled, "Gosh almighty, that soup is as salty as brine—but by Heck that's the way I like it."

HE WAS C. O. D.

A few days ago, Captain Yung, ward surgeon of C-6, was officer of the day No. 2. While absent from the ward, a lieutenant came to see the captain and not finding him inquired of the nurse where he was. The nurse replied, "Captain Yung is not here. He is C. O. D. today."
