ARMY NURSE CORPUS NEWS

CONDUCTED BY MISS ELIZABETH P. UZELMEIER

LURING EDISON.

Capt. Hayes dined at the Nurse's Home Tuesday evening. Later, the quips strains of our now "Edison" lured several others to our attractive living room to enjoy an evening of music with us, among whom were: Capt. Stockard and Johnson and the Misses Renn. Our interest in the "Edison" was somewhat diverted when Miss Wait and Capt. Hayes executed some fancy steps which could only have been eclipsed by those of Isadora Duncan.

Lt. Wilson, who was O. D., graciously contributed a watermelon, the largest of the season, to the evening enjoyment.

THE THORN IN THE PATH.

With a light in his eyes and a song
in his heart
As he strode toward a certain ward:
Lieutenant Blank saw neither you or
I
As he was passing by.

I trust she's alone—his thoughts ran
on;
In her sanctum of drugs and charts
But he spied another with the lady fair

As he was passing there.
"Come in Lieutenant," said the pretty maid
"The Captain just came for a call"
"No thanks," he replied with a hidden sigh

"I was merely passing by."

KEEP THE VIGIL

GROUP OF NURSES NOW ON NIGHT DUTY.

When the base hospital wards are wrapped in the silence of darkness and night, these are the nurses who keep the long vigil of being present to administer to any wants of the soldier patients. The night shift of the wards is in charge of one nurse and an orderly for each building and with the officer of the day, a medical officer, ready at all hours to answer an emergency call. The nurse take turns at the night day shift.

The call of serving through the hours when the hospital sleeps has not cast down the countenance of these women, as the picture of the group, gathered about the chief nurse, Miss Susan G. Parish shows. The women are assembled in the camp of young pine trees at the side of the new nurses home, with a part of the original nurse's home showing at the left.
