school building.

The meeting adjourned and the board went to the city council to present the question of city parks and playgrounds, and the school bond issue. It met the approval of the City Council and was passed. Members of the Chamber of Commerce were president, Samuel Hyman; directors, Thomas Warford, Theodore Antonakos, and Harold Welborn.

Lawrence White, the "one hour president" of the Civitan Club appeared before the "One hour City Council Tuesday morning to express the need of a paved drive around the Oakwood cemetery.

He pointed out the fact that the honorable mayor and his council would some day have the same road to travel and a paved drive would make the journey a pleasure.

He also stated that this drive would not only beautify the cemetery but it would be absolutely essential in the winter time when rainy weather and heavy traffic make a molasses appearance of the drive.

The "City Realtor," Jack Crowson, presented two petitions to the city council Tuesday. He pleaded with the council to extend West Commerce to Tomlinson Furniture factory. The property between there has recently been purchased by S. C. Clark. This is, he stated, a large tract of land and if the council would issue a permit for its extension it would without doubt open up new business property that would soon be developed making a bigger business section for High Point.

The other proposition was concerning a large tract of land near Emerywood that would be ideal for parks and as a recreation center for the city. This land is shaded by large oak trees and has a spring. The property which has 20 acres was purchased at a sum of about $12,500. The people of High Point have long been in need of a recreation center and Mr. Clark has consented to donate this of the people will maintain it. The council left it in the hands of the civil engineer to survey these tracts and report his findings.

JUNIORS MEET

The junior class held a meeting Thursday during the first period. The object of the meeting was to practice the songs that are to be sung on Friday night at the junior-senior reception. After some yells and songs the class adjourned.

The girls can be seen going in and out of the ladies shops in High Point, getting ready for the junior-senior reception.

"Her education cost her dad a fortune—tutors, finishing school, travel. But, then, she'll make a brilliant marriages, no doubt."

"Probably. I heard her say today that she's a heavy sugar bozo's red hot mama."

Practical Exaggeration

"What's the idea?" expostulated the wife. "Why did you tell that plumber that all sorts of things were wrong with our water system? You know very well that it's only a simple leak in one pipe."

"I know it," agreed Mr. Sharpe, "but now maybe he'll bring along enough tools to repair it."

"Of course," gushed the sweet young thing to the handsome actor, "you get hundreds of mash notes. Tell me, do you write the answers yourself?"

"I do," he replied. "But," he added sadly, "my wife dictates them."
