LOCAL GIRLS DEFEAT OLD TOWN HERE, 24-61

Hamil Stars for High Point; Scott and Martin Score Six Each for Visitors; Few Fouls Called On Either Team.

Last Friday night the local girls started what they hope to be the beginning of another series of victories by defeating the sextet from Old Town, by the score of 24 to 61. The game was one of the best seen on the local court this year. Few fouls were called on either team.

The High Pointers started the game off with a rush and had scored several points before the visitors were able to get the ball in their possession. They outplayed the Old Town girls in every phase of the game and were holding the big end of a 14-7 score at the end of the half.

In the third quarter the visiting team made such a come-back that the locals seemed unable to check them and at the end of the quarter they had the score a tie. The local girls then realized that they would have to fight for victory, so in about three minutes time they rang up eight points to send the visitors home in defeat.

Scott and Martin each scored 6 points for the visitors. Hamil was high scorer for the locals. She scored exactly half of the team's points.

HIGH POINT TO PLAY GREENSBORO FOR THE GROUP CHAMPIONSHIP

The Black Bisons started their 1929 basket ball championship schedule Friday night by taking an easy victory from the Kernersville quint, 63 to 10. The Pointers have completed a very successful season losing only four games, twice to Durham, once to Candor, and once to Winston.

High Point will meet Greensboro Tuesday night for the championship of group 1, Greensboro having defeated Reidsville, 24 to 20, Saturday night. The Pointers have already defeated the Greensboro quint twice and both times by large score, so they are expecting to be champions of group 1 Wednesday.

CLASS BASKET BALL FOR GIRLS TO BEGIN SOON

With the close of the regular basket ball season, comes the interest in class basket ball. Miss Wilson, who will coach the class teams this year, says she hopes to have the games played early in March. The teams are already practicing. The practice schedule is as follows:

- Monday, Freshmen and Juniors.
- Tuesday, Sophomores and Seniors.
- Wednesday, Seniors and Juniors.
- Thursday, Freshmen and Sophomores.
- Friday, Open to anyone who wishes to practise.

Approximately seventy-five girls have signed up and a great many more are expected out before the close of the schedule signing-up. Of this number the majority come from two lower classes.

BISONS JUNIOR WIN FROM CURRY HIGH

The High Point high school second team won their second game from the Curry High School in Greensboro Thursday night, by the score of 27 to 20. The game was a close affair and both teams played a bang up game of ball. Reed was high scorer for High Point.

CLASS BASKET BALL PRACTICE STARTED

Practice for class basket ball started last Friday for the class basket ball schedule. The Seniors, Juniors, and Sophomores will have one team each, while the Freshmen will have two teams to balance the league because of the facility of having a team, this will make six teams and they will probably play one game each week.

JUNIORS ADVERTISE TRIP THROUGH FRANCE

(Concluded from Page 1) were made by pupils who could draw well. These showed a map of the villages which would be passed by the tourists availing themselves of these opportunities to travel, and gave interesting facts about the larger villages. Some gave a schedule for each day.

Different schemes for covers were carried out. Some were colored and others were white with an artistic picture on the front. All things considered, some of the bulletins made offer as delightful a trip as those sent out by regular traveling agencies.

Buying Library Books Is Interesting Work

Student Sees Librarians Buy New Books To Add To High School List.

It happened that on the 28th of January last, I was leisurely walking up town from the library. I had gotten a little past Miss Moore's book store, after looking for quite a while at the unusually pretty window display, when whom should I bump into but Miss Mae Graham who was rushing past me in the down town direction. We exchanged pleasant greetings, and she said "Won't you walk back to Miss Moore's with me, and wait there a few minutes? Miss Foster and I will go home in about five minutes, so come back and then walk home with us." I agreed and we walked back to the book store together. Upon opening the door, the first thing we saw was the worthy Miss Foster's head buried deep in a lovely edition of "Jeanne d'Arc," over which she was exclaiming esastically.

Miss Foster: "Mae, isn't this gorgeous, wonderful, glorious? I'll have to get it for myself."

Miss Graham: "But I thought that we came here to buy books for the library not to take things for ourselves."

Miss Foster: "But I must have it." (And, I may add, she did.)

After that Miss Graham tried to keep Miss Foster's mind strictly on the books for the library but it must be confessed that her own attention strayed at the sight of so many beautifully illustrated and bound volumes. First Miss Foster would dash to the back of the store and bring out an exquisite edition of Tales of English Chivalry.

After much debating and continued glances at the price, they decided that it was too simplified for the high school students. Then at the front of the store were some larger and newer editions of great books. Among these was the "Autobiography of Benito Mussolini." Miss Foster insisted that we ought to have it, and we agreed. But alas! When we later found out how our little list had grown, we regretfully left Benito's life for another time. After rummaging around on those interesting shelves, we came across a book which we all agreed (that is Misses Foster and Graham did) that we ought to have.

It was Robert Frost's "West-Running Brook." That was added to the list that was rapidly growing on the counter. Here I intervened and said that we ought to have some really truly novels, of which they had none so far. The one they all finally decided on was "Sorrell and Son" so all you who are glad to see it on the library shelves may thank me for bringing it there.

After this we looked around some more, and found a most delightful edition of—well, I'll tell you just how it all came about. Miss Graham had been looking around all by herself, and had brought out several books which had been rejected because of—um, I reckon price, because you see, the purse was rather anemic. Anyway, at last she brought forth with squeaks of rapture a copy of Knickerbocker's "History of New York." I really thought those two librarians would die of joy over that book. With some careful figuring, and much joy the book was added to the pile on the counter. In close succession followed "Life on the Mississippi by Twain," "Some Wild Animals I Have Known," and a new copy of Blackmore's "Lorna Doone. We all kept bringing more and more books to add to the pile and when at last we stopped, we all nearly fainted at the total of the prices. Tearfully we took back some of the weeded-out ones to their shelves but everybody was mighty happy at the ones we did have.

Manfully, I tried to the last to convince the worthy Misses that the students really needed to read "Michael Strogoff" which all of you know and want to read. Time and time again I laid it surreptitiously on the pile and time and time again it went back firmly, but they did promise me that when the second installment of new books is ordered, it will possibly be with them.

Our five minutes had lengthened into thirty-five, and I got a merry hullabaloo when I got home for staying out much later than I intended to, and not letting the reverend pater know where I was, But believe me, everybody, it was worth it. Anybody who hasn't bought, that is, helped to buy books for the library, has missed a lot. It sho' was fun, and now we all will have the pleasure of reading the books!

age. The headlines were glaring, and hinted darkly at mystery and foul play.

Another day the class imagined they were spending the Christmas holidays in Raveloe, and wrote to their friends glowing accounts of the Casses' New Year's ball, of an exciting game of whist with the old doctor, or an interesting fox hunt with Godfrey Cass and his friends. Some of these letters were tied with the sentimental red ribbon; others were yellowed from age, and showed signs of having been in the "family" for generations.

A different sort of thing which the class attempted was advertising for the different business and professional men of the town. Even the rector offered his services for complete absolving from sin, with the slogan "Honest confessions are good for the soul." Not to mention the butcher, the baker, and the blacksmith and veterinarian. The results, if not good, were at least humorous.

The week was not considered complete without considering how Eppie and Aaron spent their days. To this purpose, a diary was kept for a week or ten days. Whether the student elected to write the diary of Eppie or of Aaron, he gave a close account of the little hum-drum affairs which filled the lives of these young people.

setting and posture, and has a poetic prologue by Edna St. Vincent Millay. Velva Hayden as Columbine and Robert Davis as Pierrot, mock at love, swear by the moon, dance to lilting melodies, and sing the waltz songs from "Cherry Blossom" and "Blossom Time." The fantasy was staged with success at the Junior-Senior reception last spring with Julia Marsh dancing the role of Columbine.

"The Man in the Bowler Hat" will form the light piece of the evening and will be acted with as much enthusiasm and exaggeration of action as a typical villain-hero play can be done. The cast will be as follows: Mary, Marion Shipman; John, Woodrow Brooks; the Hero, Robert Davis; the Heroine, Marie Payne; the Villain, Lucas Ables.

The play is by A. A. Milne and combines mystery, love, and comedy, in such a way that the result will be one of hilarity. Woodrow Brooks plays a part in his typical comic vein and will romp through the part in a lightly farcial manner.

"The Valiant"

"The Valiant" will form the serious place in the bill and will serve to offer La Verne Hudson and Kent Douglas an opportunity to pull at the heart strings of the audience. The story is of the unknown condemned prisoner who is to die at twelve o'clock and of the lovely Josephine Paris, who comes to the prison hoping that she will be able to prove him to be her long lost brother. The play is built around the famous Shakespearian thought:

"Cowards die many times before their deaths;

The Valiant never tastes of death but once."

The cast has not been completed at the present but will be drawn from the following: La Verne Hudson, Kent Douglas, Richard Samuels, Ralto Farlow, David Parsons, Herman Yokely, and Ernest Auman.
