Harlee's Feature Latest Styles

By ERNESTINE HANCOCK

Are you one of the fashion conscious girls who are always thumbing through Mademoiselle wishing there were a place in High Point where such fashions as you fondly gaze over in that magazine could be found? Well, there is such a place—Harlee's. They carry dresses with such well-known labels as Mary Muffet, Tom Boy (American Golfer), Sorority, and Flora.

For just $1.98 you can get an adjustable pinafore, with wide ruffles and a full gathered skirt. They come in red and white or blue and white candy stripes, and are just the thing for this hot weather.

Very new and popular are the silk jersey dresses with fitted basque, and a poppy blown swing skirt, in the brightest of colors.

If you're one of the girls always admiring Marguerite Murray's, Marjorie Merrilee's, Carolyn Jones', and Nancy Bennett's summer dresses, just ask them where they're from and they'll tell you, "Harlee's." There you may find the new craze, waffle pique dresses. For instance, there is a tiered one trimmed in eyelet. It's yours for only $9.95.

Another dress worth the attention if you like the casual look of suits, is the two-piece dress of linen made to look like a dressmaker suit. They come in white or any of the luscious pastels, and are priced at just $12.95. For those of you who like that "dressed up" feeling, there is a maize dress with fitted top and skirt cut into five flounces.

Other dresses are made of dotted Swiss, seersucker, spun rayon, sharkskin, chintz, French gingham, and pique, designed to give you the smart, chic look. They come in almost any color and all pastels, and are priced from just $1.98 up. Here I might mention the adorable seersucker two-pieced dress, with yoke, ruffle trimmed, three-quarter length sleeves, and skirt in big box pleats. It's a Gay Gibson original and comes in a number of desirable shades.

For Sunday there is a unique creation, a full length luggage coat with back bow, and the most unusual button holes, consisting of huge appliqued flowers, which when buttoned have for the center the coat buttons. Under it is a flowered silk dress of yellow and luggage. Imagine this at only $10.95!

Harlee's slacks are the best-looking yet with pleats and no cuffs. Some have inset pockets. A jacket of contrasting color and vented back has patch pockets with tiny inset pockets in them. The slacks come in navy, luggage, black, and the coat in yellow, green, and red. Prices range from $5.95 to $10.95.

Full, and made for action and sheer flattery, are the new Jantzen shorts ($2.95) and halters ($1.95) in navy or white. An interesting feature of the halter is that there are no straps to spoil the looks of your backless evening gown with an uneven tan.

The newest thing in costume jewelry are the sets of bracelet, earrings, pin, and necklace of colorful moonstones. Phyllis Freeman has a set of the beads and bracelet. There are also gold or silver identification bracelets for only $1.00 and your name and address is engraved free of charge.

For clothes that always make you appear at your best, visit the store of distinction, Harlee's. —(adv.)

BOOK REVIEW

You Can't Do Business With Hitler by Douglas Miller.

Do you want to know how Hitler rose to power or how Hitler controls German business? How American and French business establishments in Germany were destroyed? How the Jewish population of Germany was annihilated? If so, read "You Can't Do Business with Hitler." It relates how the German government seized control of the factories, the complete economic network of Germany, and how the foreign and domestic trade is controlled.

Illustrations show the degree of war-mindedness of the German people in everyday life, even before the war started. American firms in competition with German firms were eradicated.

Douglas Miller presents with much accuracy the post-war world if Hitler wins the war. What will happen to England, the rest of Europe, Latin America, Africa, and the United States should win? Answers can be found in this book.

Douglas Miller, the author, was an American correspondent in Berlin who was an eye witness of Hitler's rise into power. He witnessed the subjection of the German people by the world's greatest menace.

This is a "must read" book on everybody's list.

FADS and FASHIONS

By Ernestine Hancock

Fashion is fickle—today it's one thing, tomorrow it's another, but one type of suit that will always be popular is the navy winged with white collar and cuffs. It is as tonic to a wardrobe as a gust of air to a smoky room. Whatever type of suit you plan to buy for spring get as good an outfit as you can afford, because it may be your last for a while, with the government taking over a good deal of the wool. Don't get anything flashy that you will tire of easily, and get something that you feel comfortable in, for you will probably be wearing it for a long time.

Gracing feminine heads are the knitted and crocheted pill boxes, decorated with pom poms or bows. You can buy them or make them for yourself for so little that you can afford to have one for each of your outfits.

Very pretty are the evening dresses of waffle pique or French gingham with cart - wheeling skirts of wide shirred flounces, piped with sheer lace.

A young mountaineer had been drafted. During the examination he was asked if he could read.

"Wool, yes, and no. I kin read figgers purty well, but I don't go for words."

"How's that?" asked the chairman.

"Wool, take these here road signs. I can read how far but not whurto."
