

Divorce Action Being Taken In Shields-Shaw Marriage

After one month of beautiful matrimonial blitz, Mrs. Frankentina Shields-Shaw is traveling to Reno, Nevada, to seek a divorce from Professor Mopsie Shields-Shaw, caretaker of the high school ruler, protractor, and compass department.

Mrs. Shields-Shaw, until her sudden departure, was the instructor of class in speeding and one-armed driving at this school. Accompanying the attractive bride of four weeks is Jackson "Butterball" Petit, who will serve as attorney in the case. The suit will be filed within a week on grounds of two days' separation.

Lawyer Petit in revealing the circumstances of the separation said that Prof. Shield-Shaw accused his wife of trying to feed him cement biscuits; and after losing his front teeth (draw your own conclusions), he went home to his daughter Sarah. Due to this unfortunate incident he will not be able to resume his duties until Drs. Pester and Hot-Foot Zimmerman supply him with a brand new upper plate.

It is believed that the Shields-Shaw home on West Timber Drive will be converted into an ice skating rink for teen-agers.

Hendrick Incites Riot In Court

Baby Boy Hendrick battled for his life in a public brawl yesterday morning when he was tried in court on charges of revealing the secret of his baby formula to the Russians.

The court session opened with a bang as the defendant was led in, blowing bubble gum. When the precious child was asked to tell the court his formula, Baby Boy suddenly leaped from his high chair and began hitting the judge and various members of the jury over the head with his rattler. After doing this, he calmly took out a water gun and shot fifteen innocent bystanders in the face with Hadaacol. G-Men Hatch and Hunter rushed to the scene and succeeded in putting a strait-jacket on the accused just as he screamed out the secret, "Goo-goo-da-da-goo-goo!"

Pickens Threatens To Resign If New Camera Is Not Purchased

Clickin' Pickens, POINTER and PEMICAN photographer, stated yesterday while in the dark (room, that is), that he had cracked about enough bulbs for both publications to entitle him to complete retirement and a "Shutterbug's" pension for the remaining years spent at high school.

When asked the real reason for his retirement, he replied, "A man of my clickin' technique needs, and should have, the best camera manufactured—a Kalart camera!"

One reporter babbled to Mr. Clickin' Pickens, "I thought the new camera, purchased by the PEMICAN staff, featured all the extra devices."

"Well," replied Pickens, "if my services are to be resumed as the P and P photographer, the camera of tomorrow must be purchased immediately, if not sooner."

What's to be done? Should Pickens retire, or should the P and P staffs go into debt to purchase this camera of tomorrow, fully equipped with an alert electric brain (especially handy for Andy), and an attachable glass cage built for the little birdies, also a built-in record player for counting one-two-three.

Nancy J. Monroe Hits Low On Test

Late one afternoon, after all the happy students had left this Institution of Culture, a Pointer reporter was wandering down the dark and empty halls, running some belated errands for Miss Young.

As his feet strode down the large dim corridor making their miserable clacking sound, they suddenly paused as the faint sounds of sobbing gently floated from nowhere.

Opening the door to "nowhere;" he beheld Nancy Jean Monroe, the source of the sobs. Gently he questioned:

"Damsel, what art wrong with thou?" (Oh, medieval he!)

Well, it seems that her unhappiness has resulted from the fact that she made a new low on her aptitude test — mentally superior to a xaphiadophus (and that ain't good either.)

It has been heard from reliable sources that Miss Geneva Dypill, drama wizard and director of the Better Club, has chosen as the club's annual extravaganza the play, "The Pearls of Geneva," just because it has her name in it. She has also cast herself in the lead, it was learned today.

Miss Bypill was very careful to choose her lover in the play. It has been rumored that she wanted Jack Powell to try out for the part. After much persuasion, Powell finally consented. However, after she heard him read the part, Miss Bypill decided that he did not put enough "omph" into it; so Jack Marion ended up with the lucky role.

(Continued from Page 1) convertible. It was stated that Walter's rather sudden departure from the school, White stated that it was due to a rather heated argument in his office concerning some detail about a talent show. White relates that Walter said: "White, you go your way; and I'll go mine." The principal added that he hadn't expected Walter's way to be so unusual.

When asked the reason for Walter's rather sudden departure from the school, White stated that it was due to a rather heated argument in his office concerning some detail about a talent show.

Principal D. P. White has just announced that he has received a letter from Barnum and Bailey Circus, stating that Paul Walter, formerly a teacher at this school, is now employed in their circus as a barker in a side show. The letter, rather lengthy, states that Walter is doing well at his new job, and that he can think of the "funniest things to say."

John Leslie Andrews, as he was attempting to lift a five pound weight, slipped and fell on the gym floor. The remains may be seen at the corner of South Main and Russell streets and at 808 Carrick Avenue. Next week, Lift-Em-Or-Learn-Em Cridlebaugh, will put on an exhibition at a new location the Y.W.C.A.

Chippy Wood's Snakes Stolen!

Chippy Wood's dream of a great snake circus was smashed when he discovered that his herd of pet snakes was missing.

After searching everywhere, he finally found the gay little creatures comfortably nestled in the Home-Ec. Lab. It seems that Mrs. Horton has become so attached to those little reptiles that she refuses to part with them.

It was a great loss on Chippy's part, as he has spent the best years of his life training his talented reptiles for their roles in a snake circus.

As poor Chippy smelled gentle whiffs of rattlesnake steak floating through the air, he wept to smell his dreams of a great snake circus going up in smoke.

After a thrilling chase of several miles on the old Winston road, police last night apprehended three members of the notorious Rhode gang. Hank Rhode, the ringleader, was included in the seizure and was arrested temporarily for opening a package of "unspeakable" cigarettes without breaking the seal. Other members arrested were Nile "Mugsy" Hunt, well known for his dope-smuggling, and William "Hoot" Gibson.

The trio was not taken without a struggle, unfortunately. The shrewd and dangerous Rhode killed three and wounded six more members of the local police squad with a revolving machine gun which he had mounted in the rear of his hopped-up Chevrolet. The officers found small arsenal stacked in the trunk of the car. None of the hoodlums were injured because Rhode, always cautious, had equipped his automobile with bullet-proof windows.

When the trio was overtaken they had just returned from Andy's a local dive, where each had filled up on strong coffee. They appeared to be unashamed as they admitted that they were on their way to make a liquor run in Virginia. The trial is scheduled for Monday.

Dean Caught In Ruthless Act

Yesterday at noon, Miss Anna Mendenhall daring dean of Senior High School girls, was caught in a ruthless act of using the pink absentee slips for lipstick tissues. Mr. N. F. Hunt made the catch.

According to Hunt, he was going down to the dean's office about twelve o'clock to see her on some official business; and as he opened the door of her office, Miss Mendenhall made a mad dash around the screen enfolding the lavatory in her office. Immediately Hunt suspected something.

As the dean suspiciously came from behind the screen, Hunt noticed the guilty look on her face; so he began to investigate the shocking situation. He said that as he thoroughly examined the contents of the trash can beside the lavatory, he found well over a dozen of the pink slips with the impression of lipstick upon them. Hunt then made the dean fess up; and when she was asked if she would say a thing or two about this, she coyly replied, "Of course! A thing or two about this."
