

Time And Place

There are two words that contain great lessons for Christian people. They are time and place. These two words contain lessons not only for Christian, but for all people. A mere suggestion will furnish food for thought to all who read and think. No person would think of playing tennis at a burial. The time and place, both say, "not here and now." Dress at the beach and at home suggests a difference on account of the time and place. The beach is one place and the home is another. Bathing beauties at the beach get their pictures and names in the papers, and their friends are proud of them; if they dressed and behaved in the same way in the home, the public would frown upon them.

Week days and Sundays are different, and God has fixed man's rights on those days—work six days for self; rest one day for God and others. No nation can survive that ignores the Sabbath. "Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy." Even in the home and kitchen and the parlor are different places, and no mother would think of preparing dinner for company in the parlor, nor think of entertaining special company in the kitchen. The place is important in human conduct. It is even so in religious life and behavior. Social functions do not belong to the Church. Many things are proper in society that are out of place in the Church. Boys have too much sense to play marbles in the Church. Girls would not think of playing games in the Church. The question naturally arises in the mind, why is this so well understood? It is a house, a place, dedicated to the worship of God, and that shuts out all worldly exercises and worldly pleasures. The very grounds of a Church should be considered sacred places. Place has much to do with action both social and moral.

People do many things on the beach they would not dare to do on the street at home. Different rooms in a house determine the kind of behavior to be observed in the house. The living-room suggests one thing, parlor another, the kitchen yet another, and the bed-room still another. People who do not respect place in their conduct have not true sense of good manners, good conduct, and good character. Not only children, but even grown people, behave differently when there is company in the house; and the character of the company enters into the behaviour of all the family. If the governor or a bishop, or an educated lady, or an aged person is the guest, it changes the manner and conduct of all the household. The place is a large factor in the way of men. In the Senate chamber in Washington there is, instinctively, a sense of dignity that creeps over all who enter that great chamber; and the time has much to do with the feeling of the visitor. If the Senate is in session, there is respect that is absent if the Senate is in adjournment.

Baseball or fishing are all right on one of the six days, but wrong on Sunday. A dance may be all right at a party, but it certainly is not at a prayer-meeting. More attention should be given to time and place in the social and business world.—W. W. Staley, in the Christian Sun.

Interest in Cotton Co-Ops is Growing

J. A. Smith, field representative of the North Carolina Cotton Growers' Association, states that the association is advancing almost the market price of cotton on all staple pooled with the association this year. Much interest is being shown in the cotton association and many are asking for information concerning it. Mr. Smith says that it is impossible for him to see all the farmers and he suggests that all interested in pooling their cotton see the following receiving agents who will be glad to give them any information in regard to the cotton association:

W. R. Woodall, Smithfield warehouse; J. M. Lawhorn, Benson warehouse; R. A. Keen, Four Oaks; Mrs. Lela T. Massey, Clayton; W. G. Wilson, Wilson's Mills; Luby Mitchell, Princeton; Floyd C. Price, Pine Level; J. C. Avera, Selma; and J. H. Barnes, Kenly.

NO SUBSTITUTE FOR LOCAL REPUTATION

We used to hear about the approaching disappearance of the independent retailer. The time was close at hand, so we were told, when he must become a hired man working for the chain stores. But these prophets failed to realize that the independent retailer may have something for which no organization, however large and well managed, can ever substitute, and that is the personal confidence of his customers based upon long acquaintance.

Farsighted manufacturers seeking nation-wide distribution have begun to realize that the local reputation is a precious asset. Instead of trying to replace the local merchant, some of them are studying how to help him.

"NEVER READ THE NEWSPAPERS"

Doctor Finley, former Commissioner of Education of the State of New York, says that if a child does not read, once he has learned to read, he is likely to become as much of an illiterate as if he had never learned.

The person who admits that he "never reads the papers" invariably discloses his ignorance when he talks about public questions, or events; and while he may not be what is strictly known as an illiterate, he defeats the very purpose of the public school system, the publication of newspapers, and all other processes of education. This may explain why there are so many such people at the movies. If most of these movies were not also "illiterate" maybe the standard of human intelligence would be higher.

IF KING CORN FAILS

In many ways corn is more important as crop in this country than wheat. Converted into pork and beef, it is the greatest of all mortgage lifters. It is the backbone of agriculture in every part of the country that can grow it, and when it fails for any reason more farmers by far are sufferers than if the wheat crop should be a failure. Possibly that is why Selma residents have long been accustomed to hearing the statement that "Corn is king!"

THERE'S always some favored one with a charm that's all her own. . . . And everywhere in the modern scene you'll see happy smokers breaking out fresh, fragrant packs of Camels . . . a natural choice too!

For the mildness of Camels is a charm that's all its own . . . a natural mildness that's a quality of choicest tobaccos. Don't confuse this fresh, fragrant mildness with the flatness or insipidness of "over-treated" tobacco. There's a delightful natural fragrance to Camels, too, a "bouquet" as distinctive as the fragrance of oriental flowers.

Here's to the delightful things of life! Have a Camel!
