Selma Scouts and Cubs Enjoyed Week-End at Duke University

Boy Scouts of Tuscarora Council were so royally entertained by Duke University last week end they didn't have time to cook. Section 12 of Dukes mammoth stadium was reserved for them to see the Duke University and the University of Maryland football game. The Scouts filled the space and flowed over into an adjoining section.

Approximately 700 Scouts, Cubs and adults from the Tuscarora Council were guests of the University. There were 23 Scouts, 18 Cubs and seven adults representing Selma Boy Scout troop No. 32. Johnston County had the largest representation present of any of the four counties in the council.

Scouts began arriving at Duke campus Saturday morning at 9 o'clock and continued to pour in until noon. There were two chartered busses, one church bus, several trucks and numerous private cars in the cavalcade.

The Scouts camping ground was located a city block from the stadium. The site was a high wooded hill overlooking the baseball diamond. At 11 o'clock the Scouts met in the baseball grandstand to hear talks and receive instructions. Bruce Boyer, Council Executive of Tuscarora Council was the first to speak.

The next speaker was John Dozier, assistant to the vice-president of Duke University. He outlined the institution's program of entertainment and made one request:

"All of you cheer for Duke." At 1 p. m., all Scouts, Cubs and adults accompanying Scouts were admitted free to the football game through the north gate.

After the game the Scouts hurried through supper to be on time for national roll call at the indoor stadium at 7 p. m. Following roll call the Scouts met several of Duke's top flight football players. At 9 p. m., the Scouts attended a free movie in the quadrangle building which continued until 11 o'clock.

Sunday morning the Scouts were guests at a special program in the chapel. The service started at 8:15 a. m., and was over in 40 minutes. Following the chapel exercises the Scouts were taken on a tour of the university by several members of the student body.

The Scouts began to break camp Sunday at 11 o'clock and by 2 p. m., the last Scout was on his way home.

SELMA MEN SURRENDER TO HIGH POINT POLICE

Editor Note — The following article appeared in Thursday's edition of The (High Point) Beacon:

Two young men charged with murder and robbery in the first degree walked into the police station Wednesday afternoon, October 25th and surrendered. They were accompanied by Arch K. Schoch, their attorney.

George J. Strickland, 23, and Edward Eason, 22, both of Selma, are the two men who surrendered to the cops on murder and robbery charges. No date for a preliminary hearing had been set last week. Attorney Schoch told Captain W. G. Friddle, who was on duty at the time, that since the two young men had voluntarily surrendered to the police he wanted them to get all personal protection allowed under the law.

"Just what do you mean by that?" inquired Captain Friddle. "I mean I do not want these men put through any third degree. If your officers want to talk with them I demand that I be present. I am their legally employed attorney and I am entitled to be present at any time officers question my clients."

Captain Friddle pointed out to Mr. Schoch that he was only on duty until the midnight hour and he did not have any control over people on duty at other times.

Then Mr. Schoch telephoned Chief of Police C. C. Stoker, who was at home at the time, and told him he was the legally employed attorney for the two men, and as his lawyer, he wanted to put him (Chief Stoker) on notice that he did not want his clients put through the third degree by officers and he wanted to be present at any time officers desired to question his clients.

Chief Stoker would not promise Mr. Schoch anything, but the local

Pine Level 5th Grade Holds Hobby Exhibit

By MRS. DOC R. OLIVER On Wednesday, October 25th at two o'clock, the fifth grade of the Pine Level School under the supervision of their teacher Mrs. Annie B. Beasley, of Smithfield held a hobby exhibit with their mothers as invited guests.

As each mother entered the room she was greeted by her son or daughter, who then presented her to the teacher. After all the mothers were introduced and given seats, individual pupils explained each phase of the exhibit, which was composed of original drawings, hand made stuffed dolls, doll clothes, bows and arrows, tomahawks, clay bowls and canoes, arrow heads found in Johnston County, a stamp collection, log cabin, Indian tepees etc., scarves, kimonas, handkerchiefs, bags and flags made of silk from China, pottery and woven articles made by Indians on the Cherokee Reservation and sea shells and formations found along the coast of North Carolina.

All of these hobbies, Mrs. Beasley explained, were an outgrowth of some phase of their school study. Marco Polo provided the interest in China and also served as an impetus for the collection of stamps from all over the world. Indian papooses formed from corn stalks and other "Indian" work came as a result of the study of the first men who peopled this land of ours. Each part of the exhibit was prompted by some interest that had been aroused in the individual pupils.

Particularly attractive and timely were the Halloween drawings on the board telling an original story. There were seven drawings, each occupying a whole section of the blackboard, and each drawing done by a different child, depicting a scene in the story.

After each part of the exhibit had been explained by individual pupils, other pupils who had no part in the explanations, were given an opportunity to participate by assisting their teacher in the social hour. Mrs. Beasley poured Russian tea, while these pupils passed colorful napkins, cookies and Russian tea to the visitors and other pupils.

Pupils took money to school to help their teacher defray the expenses of the refreshments. How fortunate are the students of this generation who have the opportunity of learning by practical application, and the opportunity to express this learning by their own individual abilities. How fortunate to be taught by one who recognizes the need of combining the social graces with the set curriculum. Much praise is due such a teacher.

No Injuries When Truck Overturns

No one was hurt in the overturning of a laden lumber truck Tuesday morning at 11:45 at the intersection of Highways 301 and 70 across from the Red Apple Restaurant.

Haywood Hagins, Jr., 19, Negro, of Wendell was driver of the truck. He told investigating officers, State Highway Patrolman First Class F. B. Trivette of Pine Level, that as he made the turn from 301 up the paved connection to 70 the rear chain holding the lumber gave way and the lumber shifted, pulling the truck over. The pull of the lumber carried the truck all the way over and it landed upside down with all wheels in the air.

Hagins and his white companion, Charlie B. Mims of Clayton, crawled out the cab windows. The cab appeared badly crushed, but Trivette said damage as yet is undetermined.

The truck, a 1946 Ford tractor model, belongs to Gattis Lee of Clayton.

Trivette said no arrest has been made.
