

WRITES ABOUT VISIT TO LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

(Betty Brockmann)

During my recent stay in Washington, I went to the Congressional Library. I ate my luncheon in a cafeteria in the basement of the beautiful, white, marble Supreme Court building.

Then my mother, grandmother, brother and I went to the Library of Congress. It is a large building, built for the people who are interested in everything, because there is at least one of every book of any importance in the world in it. It is also a building used for various exhibitions.

The inside of the building is marvelously built. All around a great dome above our heads, there were pictures of gods and goddesses to represent months of the year. Every picture was made of hundreds of little blocks of marble in different colors.

The whole building was of marble, but it was not all little blocks.

To the east of the building there was a great mosaic, about eighteen feet high, made of the little marble blocks. The picture represented either government or democracy.

To the west of the mosaic, there was a shrine built in marble. In this there were the Declaration of Independence and the United States Constitution. They are both in cases with some chemically treated glass over them, to protect them from harmful light rays.

There were also some displays of the first music, the signatures of Mark Twain, George Washington, and other great characters, the smallest booklet in the world, the smallest book in the world, and letters written by different great men.

After seeing these things we looked in the library. There were thousands and thousands of books. Everywhere we looked there were books after books. Everything, in spite of the many people within, was very quiet.

SIGNS OF SPRING SEEN AROUND JUNIOR HIGH

(Marguerite Murray)

If there is any doubt in your minds about the arrival of spring, just visit Junior High. There are signs all around the school that tell us spring is here. The boys are playing marbles and that's one sure sign of spring. There are the robins that recently appeared, flowers blooming, the grass is turning green, the air is warmer, and the sun is seen oftener. We expect to see the girls jumping rope any day. These are all sure signs of spring. It makes us feel better to see the signs of spring.

Pupils In 105 White On Their Favorite Subjects

(Ruth Williard)

A few of the pupils in room 105 are mentioning their favorite subjects in the paragraphs below.

I find history the most interesting subject I have. I like to study about our ancestors, their costumes, and ways of living. I also like to study about what is happening in the world at the present time.

—Joyce Sugg.

My favorite subject is shop. Every day when we go to shop we work on the project we are building. The first projects were the broom holder and the tie holder. The project we are now working on is a plant stand. Our work in shop is interesting and I like it very much.

—Bill Causey.

Spelling is one of my favorite studies. I like spelling because it is easy to learn. I have missed only seven words since school started. Spelling has never been hard for me, so I guess that is why I like it so well.

—Laura Hobbs.

Shop is the period that I like best. I like shop because we don't have very much written work. I also like it because I like to work with wood. We make very interesting things down in shop.

—Charles Harper.

Math. is my favorite subject because I have a good teacher, Miss Bowen. Math. is very easy for me. I have a very nice time that period.

—Robert Hedrick.

FROM 201

(William Hall)

Roy McMasters succeeded in getting his mixed periods back. He has been taking English during gym. and library periods.

Bobby Floyd said he made eighty-two, three and one eleventh on a math. test.

Room 201 is having another spelling and attendance contest. The girls are far ahead of the boys.

During the Easter holidays Bristowe Pitts is planning to go to New York to see his mother.

The pupils in room 112 in their science class are planning to have a movie slide to help them in their studies. Different children have brought supplies toward having this. Among them are Carl Turnage, Mary Caroline Simmons, Meredith Clark Slane and Nancy Bennett.

My Trip To Washington

Not long ago, I went to Washington. I visited many interesting places, but I could only go into the capitol.

When you enter the capitol you are in the room right under the dome. In this room there were a few statues and a miniature building of the Supreme Court and one of the capitol.

The next room I entered was the old Supreme Court room. This room was chained off, but I could see quite a bit of it. All around the room were breast statues of famous men. It is not very large and will seat but a few people. There are windows in it and cushioned chairs in every corner. The Chief Justice's seat is not very long, but there is a bench-like table in front of the cushioned seats, where the associate justices sit.

There is a room full of statues in one of the wings. The wings of the building are eighty-one years younger than the dome. In this room the statues were complete and on the bottom of each was the name of the state that had given it to the capital. Unfortunately, most of the other rooms were blocked and I was unable to enter them.

Among the other buildings I visited were the Lincoln Memorial, Department of War, Department of Agriculture, the Shakespearian Library, and others.

MY PET DOG

(Tommy Stanton)

My pet is a little thoroughbred brown and white fox terrier. He has won several prizes and two ribbons in the dog shows. His name is Bliss.

Bliss can't do many tricks, but he can go and get the paper for Daddy every morning. He will go out on the front porch and sniff and look around. When he finds the paper, he gets it in his mouth and carries it upstairs to Daddy.

At night when we are eating, mother will tell him to quarrel a little for his food. After he gets it by quarrelling, he thinks he can get more by running around the house barking, but sometimes, much to his disappointment, when he returns, there is no food, but most of the time there is.

Bliss is a little house dog and he has his own little bed to sleep in. It is really a little dog bed. He goes to bed when I do.

When Daddy comes to dinner or when we come in from somewhere he will bark and run around to try to get out and greet us.

When guests come he is always so glad to see them that he overwelcomes them so we have to put him off to himself.

Sometimes when we come in some of our neighbors will tell us that he just cried like a baby because he was so lonely. But lots of times he will just howl and it sounds like a wolf is approaching us. It gives me a weird feeling.

He is so sweet and I enjoy playing with him a lot. One time I made up a little poem about him.

YOU'RE OUT!

Crack! the sound of leather meeting wood is heard frequently these days when boys (beg your pardon) even girls are planning out diamonds and having games after school. Crash! tinkle, tinkle! Oh-oh that's the only kink in the game when you're in the pitcher's box and throw a wild ball, or in the batter's place and knock a window run. Here it is spring again so take advantage of it. Play that healthful out-of-doors game—baseball.

—Byron Grandjean.

Imagine Carthell Spain not leaning back against the bulletin board in history class. He really didn't on March 19th.

MUSIC APPRECIATION CONTEST HELD MAR. 28

(Jo Ingram)

The State Music Appreciation Contest will be held Friday, March 26, in the music building of the Woman's College in Greensboro, North Carolina; the directors will be Miss Grace Van Dyke Moore of the college, and Mrs. Hattie Parrot from Raleigh.

Pupils from many schools enter this contest. They must be acquainted with many records and their composers, time, and mood. They must also know several composers and for what kind of music they were famous.

Only one person entered from our sixth grade and one other from the seventh grade. The people from our school were James Dancy, from Miss Brown's seventh grade, and Bobby Gayle, from Miss Fleming's sixth grade.

Girls Practicing For Game With Senior High

(Margaret Causby)

The girls' eighth grade basket-ball team is expecting to play the eighth grades of Senior High School very soon.

The girls have the gymnasium on Tuesdays and Wednesdays and they are staying to practice as often as they can. They are getting ready for the Senior High School girls and are hoping to win from them.

Make Good Record

John Noun's Family Tree

(James Terry)

At the head of the great English family there is John Noun who can name every person, place, or thing around the house.

Then comes Mary Pronoun who helps John Noun out if he doesn't know every person, place, or thing. Next in line is Will Verb who helps John out by putting some action, or being, into the sentence which John introduces. Sally Adjective goes with John, telling about him and describing him. And if Sallie Adjective doesn't tell it all Susie Adverb comes in and tells how she does things. Jimmie Preposition comes before John to show the relationship of him and some other part of the family. Andy Conjunction joins in sometimes and helps continue the sentence; and when John gets excited, Jimmy Interjection takes his place in the sentence. This completes John's family tree.

I APOLOGIZE

(Byron Grandjean)

I guess when I said we were due for a rainy winter and no snow whatever, I was slightly wrong. Because, since that article we have had two snows. The first was about seven inches deep. This was good packing snow, and all day Sunday and Monday the boys were taking advantage of it. I also heard Jimmy Millis was over on the golf course Sunday, almost breaking his neck on a pair of skis. The second snow came Monday, March 16 during second period, and lasted until about 4:30 o'clock. The only people that regretted it were the girls.

MR. LOMAN PROMISES PARTY TO ROOM 1

(Bill Currie)

Room 1 is having an attendance contest and it seems to be working wonders. Mr. Loman has promised to give the room a big party if the attendance is perfect for three weeks. The contest started last week, and so far it looks as though room 1 will have a party.
