

It's Not Too Early to Take Soil Samples, Reynolds Says

"Are you going to seed a new Ladino clover pasture this fall?" asks Vernon Reynolds, county agent with the North Carolina Department of Agriculture.

If so, he says it is not too early to collect soil samples and send them to the Soil Testing Laboratory for analysis. This also applies to fields which are to be used for small grains and other fall crops.

He says a soil test will be especially helpful in determining lime needs as well as correcting other major nutrient deficiencies prior to seeding. It is rather difficult to raise the lime and phosphate level in the soil plow layer by topdressing. "Therefore," says Reynolds, "the time to apply these materials if the soil is low is prior to seeding, when they can be mixed into the soil. A soil test will show you the lime, phosphate and potash levels of your soils."

The agent says by sampling now, you will have an opportunity to apply lime from two to four months prior to seeding. Ground agricultural limestone, which is normally used for liming, does not react immediately upon addition to the soil. Soil acids must act to dissolve the lime during neutralization, which is a gradual process, especially if the soil is strongly acid. Where lime is needed it

Plastic surgery for such simple defects as flyaway ears and a too-large nose have become as commonplace as having children's teeth straightened. There is no longer any excuse for a person to go through life with a nose or a pair of ears that cause him to be unhappy. The operation is often very simple and the cost in money is nothing compared with the improvement in personality and happiness that it can bring.

Many more complicated plastic surgery operations are being performed, and will be, before long, thought of as commonplace and necessary. Take, for example, the problem of a receding chin. With the addition of cartilage and bone under the skin, a whole new appearance can result.

In this same area comes the dermabrasion method of brushing off the scars left by acne or the disfigurement of a bad case of freckles. These physical handicaps may seem very small to a person with a outstanding handicap like blindness. However, everything is relative, and the person with these small imperfections can suffer, needlessly, all their lives if something is not done.

In the past, plastic surgery meant only one thing to most of us—face lifting. Professional actresses and extremely wealthy women were the only people who went in for such surgery. This is still largely true, with one big change—people, both men and women—in any kind of job where youth is of great importance, turn to this method for help.

The cost of this type of surgery is still quite high. The work is tedious and requires a great deal of skill. Doctors have found that many people who come to them for face-lifting must be turned down because they are not emotionally suited for such surgery.

The most popular type of face-lifting among men is partial surgery. The removal of eye pouches and jowls can be a great help. A man must realize that his short haircut reveals the small face-life scars that a woman's hair and make-up cover. The scars often are a greater cause of embarrassment than the wrinkles.
