

Re-Enactment A Family Affair

The First North Carolina Volunteers of the 11th Regiment enjoy going off to their make-believe wars. Forty members of the statewide membership of that War Between the States Re-enactment group met last weekend at Twin Lakes Campground.

Unlike their historical role models, these soldiers carry their families along for the events.

The women and children play an important part in the demonstration and lecture portions of the programs.

Making the camp area as authentic and home-like as possible is the first job. After that, socializing with weekend friends is the order of the day.

trial work period.

Jim Bilbro, manager of the Washington Social Security office, said over 1,500 people in the Washington area receive over $6 million annually under the disability program. He said the extended entitlement period offered the opportunity to attempt a return to work with "re-entitlement" if they were not successful.

The law requires that the disability be expected to last at least 12 months or end in death to be eligible for payments. A person must also meet an earnings requirement. Under the Supplemental Security Income Program there is no earnings requirement but the applicant must meet certain income levels. Those having disabling conditions should contact the Washington office.

Williamston had success with its starting offensive and defensive alignments, but West Craven was inconsistent on both sides of the ball.

"Right now, I'm just looking for some consistency," Jordan said. "On offense, we'd move the ball on one possession. Then, on the next one, we would sputter. It was like that on defense as well. The whole scrimmage was really good preparation for us."

Jordan did say his team's enthusiasm and intensity levels had risen several notches above last week's scrimmage.

"The kids really went all-out on both sides," he said. "Based on last week, we were pleased with that aspect. And we did some things I liked and a lot more things I didn't like."

"We've still got a lot of work to do — no question about it."

West Craven travels to North Pitt for an 8 p.m. game Friday night. The Eagles are looking to improve on last year's 7-4-1 record.
